Planned restaurant faces $128,000 parking payout

Three men who want to turn Arlington Heights' Old Pool Hall at 1 N. Vail Ave. into a restaurant are faced with a possible required donation of $128,000 to the village's parking fund.

The three, partners in Old Pool Hall Inc., have requested a variation from an Arlington Heights ordinance that sets out a contribution of $1,600 for every required off-street parking place not provided for the project.

Based on the floor area of the proposed restaurant, the building would need about 80 such parking places, John Best, village planning engineer, said Friday.

But because of the 82-year-old building's location in the downtown business district, the developers say they are unable to provide any off street parking.

NOV. 10, THE Arlington Heights zoning board of appeals will hear the petition for relief from the parking requirement. The board has the power to recommend reduction or complete waiver of the cash contribution.

Final authority in the matter rests with the village board.

The three men, William Harvey of Evanston, Michael Jordan of Elmhurst and Robert Pennacchio of Mount Prospect, say they plan to establish a quality restaurant that will maintain the building's exterior as a historic landmark.

Not enough vacant land surrounds the pool hall to provide the parking required by the village's zoning ordinance and attempts to buy additional land have been unsuccessful, the partners say.

DOWNTOWN PARKING is sufficient to accommodate the proposed restaurant, they contend. Parking is available on the street and in nearby commuter and shopper parking lots.

The $128,000 parking contribution requirement is "excessive and confiscatory," according to the petition for relief.

Money contributed to the village fund is set aside to pay for parking lot improvements that theoretically benefit the contributor and all other downtown businesses.

The ordinance has been criticized as being a deterrent to redevelopment of the central business district, particularly by persons advocating construction of a multiple-story parking garage downtown.

NOV. 5, THE Arlington Heights plan commission will review the remodeling plans that call for a bar and lounge in the basement of the building and restaurant seating on the main and mezzanine floors.

The restaurant will seat about 225 people, Best said.

A restaurant is the only feasible use for the old pool hall which has stood vacant for the past several years, the partners say.

If their plan to remodel the building is rejected, the structure probably will be torn down, or continue to deteriorate from lack of use, according to the partners.

A previous restaurant plan for the building was abandoned because of the parking requirement. Under the old plan, 40 parking spaces or a $64,000 contribution was necessary. The village board ultimately reduced the figure to $25,000. But prospective developers backed out, saying that even a $25,000 contribution added too much to the cost of the project.

County officials to mull Magnus zoning issue

by ANN SLAVICEK

The battle over zoning for the 42-acre Magnus Farm has given county officials a massive legal headache.

County Zoning Board of Appeals members Friday heard arguments from the villages of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights and from Alexander Magnus, owner of the nursing and retirement home.

At the hearing in Chicago, the two villages urged the property be zoned for single-family homes with a special use permit to allow development of the new nursing and retirement home facilities proposed by Magnus.

But Magnus and his attorney, Perry Snyderman, argued the land should continue to be zoned for 17 multiple-family units per acre with a special use to restrict nursing and retirement homes.

AFTER AN HOUR of listening to the two sides, county zoners realized that they were faced with a set of impossible alternatives brought on by the unique legal position taken by the county in dropping its old zoning ordinance and maps in exchange for a new ordinance.

If the county zones the land R-7 multiple-family under the new ordinance with a special use, it will face a lawsuit by the two villages.

If the county reverts the zoning to single-family home use with a special

Wrigley clocks bow out as Daylight Saving ends

At 2 a.m. Sunday, a maintenance man at the Wrigley Building on Michigan Avenue will pull the switch on the Chicago area's most famous clocks beginning the ritual of changing from daylight saving time to standard time.

The electricity will shut off and the 7½-foot-tall hour hands and 11½-foot-tall second hands will cease moving for one hour. Sixty minutes later the timepieces will be set in motion.

Daylight saving time is about to end, despite efforts in Congress to keep it alive in new format.

GOVERNMENT REPORTS show that the nation saved energy, reduced urban crime and experienced a decline in the number of fatal auto accidents during the two-year daylight saving time trial basis. The test had the country on eight months of daylight saving time and four months of standard time. The experiment ends Sunday.

To the Wrigley Building people it doesn't much matter when they have to fix their clocks. It's all done by remote control. No super human with the wing span of a prehistoric bird is needed to move the dials.

"There's nobody who uses his little pinky and gives it (the clock) a turn," said Robert Ryan, building superintendent. "Changing the clocks is unromantic and uninteresting."

The clockwork was completed in 1921 with the structure built into the surface of the building. The clocks are driven by a series of impulses which moves the hands minute-by-minute.

THE SOPHISTICATED electrical system is controlled in the basement. It is hooked into the 25 clocks inside the building, built by the architectural firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst and White. The cost of running the clocks is small, Ryan said.

The only thing to worry about is when to restart the clocks so they synchronize correctly. The procedure is done every six months (moving the clocks ahead takes about 30 seconds worth of impulses) from now on unless new legislation permanently puts the nation on daylight saving time eight or nine months of the year.

Before the trial period daylight saving time was in effect for six months, from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October.

He talks to the animals

Charlie Hume's friends appear on television, in magazines and as stars of advertisements

by STIRLING MORITA

The way Charlie Hume puts it: "There aren't a lot of nuts like me ... who go all out for animals."

And if you look closely, chances are some of Charlie's exotic animals would have appeared, gracing magazine pages or the television screen. Whether it be Friendly, the lovely llama, modeling South American jewelry for a full-page ad in New Yorker magazine, or a bank commercial with rabbits, magically multiplying on the screen.

Or Louie, the kissing llama, nuzzling female members of a television crew during the credits of a TV documentary show.

AND IF YOU were around in 1955, you might have seen Hume sitting alongside John Daly in "What's My Line?" Charlie's line at the time was breeding skunks.

Hume says the television appearance gave him such notoriety that letters addressed to "Charles Hume, Chicago, Ill.," made their way to his Des Plaines mailbox. He has come a long way since he started raising guinea pigs in the basement of his Des Plaines home. Now, he raises everything from white mice and soudads to multi-colored macaws and camels at his 80-acre Woodstock farm and his 2½-acre site near Golf and Arlington Heights roads, Arlington Heights.

But his job is not just supplying animals for ads. A majority of it is providing them for pets, zoos, Safari-lands and research laboratories from his company, Scientific Animal Lab and Farm Inc. He also distributes feed for the area from the Ralston-Purina Co. as Scientific Animal Feeds Inc.

BUT THE EMPHASIS with Hume has always been on breeding unusual animals or ones that are on the endangered species list. The reason? It is a challenge, Hume says.

County Hospital strike 'certain'

Cook County Hospital's 500 residents and interns are certain to strike on Monday, said Dr. Kevin Geraghty, a spokesman for the hospital's House Staff Assn. Geraghty said if the strike occurs, it probably would last a minimum of two weeks. A move by the hospital's governing commission to find a factfinder to intervene in the contract negotiations was too late to avoid the strike, Geraghty said. Dr. James Haughton, executive director of the commission, told a news conference Thursday he asked for a factfinder after federal mediation in the dispute ended Wednesday. He said the governing commission advised him Tuesday they had decided unanimously not to make any further contract concessions to the doctors. Haughton said concessions had already been made concerning working hours and salary, including a minimum $600-a-year increase retroactive to July 1. He said he would discipline any doctor who does not perform his regular duties. HSA members have threatened not to treat any patient who enters the hospital's emergency room after 6:30 a.m. Monday.

9 injured in Palatine crash

Seven children and two adults were injured in a two-car collision at Palatine and Elm roads in Palatine Township Friday. Listed in serious condition at Northwest Community Hospital were Susan Clementi, 10, and her brothers James, 8; Matt, 12, and Paul, 9. Listed in fair condition were Amy Clementi, 6, and Betty Reed, 45, of Roselle. Treated and released following the crash were Mrs. Margaret Clementi, 35; Beth Clementi, 3; and Anthony Schanna, 10, 625 Peables, Palatine. The Clementi family lives in the Willow Walk subdivision, Palatine. Police said the vehicle driven by Mrs. Reed was southbound on Elm Road when wet road conditions caused her to slide, striking the westbound station wagon of Mrs. Clementi. Mrs. Reed was charged with failure to stop.

Grenade found at church

A hand grenade was found buried behind the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, 382 S. Mount Prospect Rd., Des Plaines Friday by a construction crew working at the church. The grenade was removed without incident by the bomb and arson squad of the Cook County Sheriff's Police. The construction crew from Milburn Brothers, Mount Prospect, was digging a drainage ditch for the church parking lot when workman saw what they thought was just a "piece of iron." Police speculated that the grenade had been buried since World War II, but nobody knows how it got on church property.

Up to $81 million for school at stake

Budget veto upset still uncertain

by WANDALYN RICE

An override of Gov. Daniel Walker's school aid budget cuts is far from a sure thing, even though supporters of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley believe they will pick up three more votes when the issue is tested again.

The vote Thursday in the Illinois House to override the $81 million cut in the general school aid formula was tied 88 to 86, with five representatives absent.

Leaders of the override effort said they believe at least three of the five absentees will vote to override the veto when the issue comes up again, theoretically bringing the total to the 89 needed to restore the funds.

However, legislators on both sides of the issue said they expect to see some of those who voted in favor of the override in the test vote to switch their votes between now and the time the Illinois General Assembly reconvenes Nov. 3.

DALEY PERSONALLY traveled to Springfield Thursday to lobby for the $81 million, half of which would go to the Chicago Public Schools.

A majority of Northwest suburban legislators voted against the override attempt, including several who have long supported education funding by the state.

State Rep. Richard A. Mugallian, D-Palatine, one of those who voted against the override, said Friday he expects intense lobbying by those favoring the override between now and the time the legislature reconvenes.

"I think the chances are at least 50-50 that they will be able to override," Mugallian said. "They can do a lot of arm-twisting between now and then."

State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie, who voted for the override, said the final vote on the issue will be close.

"AS A PRACTICAL political matter, we may be able to pick up three votes (from among absent legislators), but we may lose two or three," he said. "I don't think the 88 votes (for the override) are hard votes. I think there can be some erosion there."

MUGALLIAN, who has received strong support from educators in past elections, said voting against the override was "difficult in a political sense." But, he said, the state cannot afford to override all the vetoes.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, a member of the House Education Committee, also voted against the override. She said, "It was a hard vote for me. I think I did the right thing."

Mrs. Chapman agreed lobbying

• In favor of the override: Harold Katz, D-Glencoe; Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie; Jack B. Williams, D-Franklin Park; Ted F. Leverenz, D-Maywood.

• Against the override: Eugene F. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights; Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington

will be intense in the next two weeks, and said she expects to hear from persons urging her to change her vote.

SHE SAID, "If I could be convinced that the issue was so urgent that it should override the state's financial health, or that we aren't in a fiscal crisis, I would change my vote. But unless I'm given some more information, I don't think I'll be able to."

Mugallian and other legislators who voted against the cuts said they may vote in favor of overrides on at least some of the $35 million in cuts in categorical aid to schools, which includes special education and transportation funds. The bill containing the categorical aid will be voted on before the general school aid veto is reconsidered.

MUGALLIAN SAID the categorical aid cuts may have a better chance of being overridden, because "some of us would like to help education as much as possible without driving the state into bankruptcy."

State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, agreed some categorical cuts may be overturned. He said, "I could vote to restore a million dollars for gifted children without being fiscally irresponsible."

Mugallian, Schlickman and State Rep. John Matijevich, D-North Chicago, lost a move Thursday after the preliminary vote was taken to prevent Chicago Democrats from postponing the final vote on the issue. If the move had been successful, the override attempt would have been dead.

"The motion to postpone was illegal," Mugallian said. "It is not permitted by our rules."

He said House Speaker William Redmond, who also voted against the override, allowed the postponement because "there had been an agreement in advance to allow them to do that."

Imperial investors get rebate

by STEVE BROWN

After more than three years of investigation and court proceedings, nearly 2,000 customers defrauded by Imperial Investors International Inc. will be getting a small percentage of their money back.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge James Parsons has ordered—that $150,000 set aside as a restitution fund be distributed by four former officials of the company who pleaded guilty to mail fraud charges last February.

Lawrence Kallen, a Chicago attorney who has been representing persons who did business with Imperial, Thursday said each of the persons who has filed a claim against Imperial will receive about 5.14 per cent of the amount they paid the company.

THE COMPANY, which was located in Des Plaines, promised to offer marketing and new product development services to investors. The Herald revealed a number of questionable business practices used by the company in early 1973. The Herald's stories touched off a series of investigations by the U.S. Attorney's office and Illinois Atty. General William Scott's Consumer Fraud and Protection Division.

The court order directing the restitution, which was part of an unusual plea agreement, was delayed while Parsons tried to determine how many persons were eligible to be paid.

The restitution payment should bring the former clients between $10 and $140, depending on how much they lost to Imperial.

Mikva backs open hearings in Congress

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, has testified in favor of opening additional congressional committee sessions to the public.

Mikva's comments will be part of new hearings by the U.S. House Rules Committee on a proposal to open congressional conference sessions to the public.

The conference committee, which is comprised of members from both the U.S. House and U.S. Senate, develop about 30 per cent of all legislation approved by Congress, Mikva said.

The committee meets to work out differences between bills passed in the House and the Senate.

"If a particular matter requires executive session, for example a matter of national security, the House will undoubtedly vote to close the session," he said.

Kallen said checks and letters explaining the final decision in the case should be mailed in about two weeks.

BEFORE ORDERING the payment, Parsons ruled that only clients of the Chicago office of Imperial and two other firms, Midwest Innovations Inc. and Product Development Services Inc., were eligible for any payments.

Attorneys for Imperial had attempted to include clients of some of the 28 franchised offices of Imperial and others who had filed suits against the company in the settlement.

Kallen said lawsuits seeking more than $800,000 in damages have been filed against the company. The settlement includes clients of Midwest Innovations and Product Development Services because the two firms were used by Imperial officials after criminal investigations were initiated against the parent firm.

Besides the restitution fund, two officials, Thomas M. Roth and Clair Wanger were forced to pay $174,979 in federal income taxes and were sentenced to six months in jail.

Two other Imperial officials pleaded guilty to the federal mail fraud charges and were placed on probation.

Daughter in coma 34 years

I can't pull the plug, says mom

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla. (UPI)—A mother who has tended her coma-stricken daughter for 34 years says she couldn't "pull the plug," as Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Quinlan want to do.

The Quinlans have asked a court in Morristown, N.J., to allow them to terminate the treatment that is keeping their 21-year-old comatose daughter, Karen Ann, alive.

"Everyone has his own feelings in a situation like this," said Mrs. Louis Esposito, who vows she will continue caring for her daughter, Elaine.

"This is my baby, smile for me, baby," says Mrs. Esposito, hugging her dark-haired daughter as she lies on her bed.

Elaine Esposito, now 41, has been in a coma since she was 6 years old when she underwent surgery for a ruptured appendix. She weighs 75 pounds now and requires constant care from her mother, who leaves the house only to attend Catholic mass or to shop for groceries.

She is turned once an hour during the day to avoid bedsores. She is massaged twice a day and is fed every four hours through a tube through her nose. Her throat is paralyzed and her right lung is collapsed.

Last April, Elaine spent 54 days in a hospital and had 150 gallstones removed.

"She survived another one," sighs Mrs. Esposito.

Elaine lies staring at the ceiling. She has a bow in her hair and makes an occasional grunting sound, which makes her mother happy.

"She seems to smile sometimes, makes kind of happy noises," Mrs. Esposito says.

Medical experts are at a loss as to the cause of the coma, which Guinness Book of Records reports is the longest on record. Specialists say either her brain was damaged by lack of oxygen during the anesthesia or she had incipient encephalitis.

Doctors said Elaine's temperature soared to 107 as they closed the incision after the appendectomy and predicted she would not survive.

They again predicted death during further abdominal surgery two years later, but again she survived, as she did several bouts with pneumonia in later years.

Still her mother has persevered.

"She does all the work," says her husband, Louis, who is unable to work because of a heart disorder. "You know, I have never seen a frown on her face."

This despite a bittersweet memory of her little girl as she went into surgery in August, 1941.

"Don't worry Mommy," were her last words. "I'm not afraid."

MRS. LOUIS Esposito comforts her daughter, Elaine, 41, who has been in a coma for 34 years, believed to be the longest on record.

'U.S. armed to teeth': poll

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pollster Louis Harris said Friday a survey he made last weekend shows Americans "are armed to the teeth with guns" and it may be because of their lack of confidence in the nation's leadership.

He told a Senate Government Operations Committee that his poll showed the ownership of guns was rising at a time more people are worried about rising levels of violence.

Seventeen million American households — or 47 per cent — have a gun in the house, compared with 41 per cent in 1968 at the peak of the urban riot period, Harris said.

"I can well see people saying, 'I have to rely on myself, I can't depend on the government,'" he said. "People trust themselves much more than they do the government."

Even though the number of guns is increasing, Harris said, a growing number of Americans favor enactment of more gun-control laws. He said these were not necessarily contradictory findings and explained: since Congress has not passed gun legislation in the face of public sentiment for it, "people are arming themselves to the teeth out of frustration that the leaders are not doing anything about violence."

He said 73 per cent of those surveyed favored "federal laws which would control the sale of guns, such as making all persons register all gun purchases no matter where the purchases are made." Twenty-four per cent were opposed, he said. That compared with a 75-14 ratio in 1968 and 66-28 in 1967.

Dr. Milton Eisenhower, chairman of the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence, told the committee his group made 80 unanimous and two split recommendations to the federal government for dealing with violence after an 18-month study in 1968 and 1969.

"None has been enacted by the federal government," he said, but "a great deal of action has been taken by most of the states."

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., asked Harris for a poll on the sentiment for banning all private ownership of handguns and Harris said he would do one.

Harris told the panel that 68 per cent of those polled believe the easy availability of guns contributes to violence.

Among those who owned no guns, 83 per cent favored registration, 13 said no. Among owners, the ratio was 63-34, he said. Those who owned only handguns and no rifles favored registration by a 64-33 margin, he said.

Generalissimo Francisco Franco Friday suffered his second heart attack in four days, doctors said, sparking new fears that death may not be far off for the 82-year-old strongman. Medical sources familiar with his case said it is difficult to prolong the life of a man Franco's age after the damage caused by two successive heart attacks. But the aged Caudillo's doctors said in a new unscheduled medical bulletin that he survived the attack and was "resting quietly."

15 more killed in Beirut violence

Rival Lebanese militias fought fiercely from rooftops and street barricades in eastern Beirut late Friday, undeterred by government troops sent in for the first time to help enforce a 24-hour curfew in the trouble spots. At least 15 more persons were killed in exchanges of rocket, mortar and machine gun fire between Christian rightist and Moslem leftist strongholds around eastern Beirut. The over-all toll for the past six weeks of civil warfare now stands at more than 630 dead and 1,600 wounded.

Food coloring linked to genetic damage

A congressional study Friday reported for the first time that the country's most widely used food coloring — Red Dye No. 2 — has been linked to genetic damage in test animals. Food and Drug Administration officials said, however, they were satisfied the chromosomal abnormalities uncovered were not of the type that would be passed on to future generations in the form of mutations. The dye, which has already been attacked as a possible cancer cause and a potential factor in miscarriages, is a totally synthesized chemical which meets a prescribed FDA formula. The FDA said its evaluation of existing data indicates that the dye poses no risk to the consumer.

Mitchell 'in dark' on mail openings

Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell testified Friday he was kept in the dark about illegal domestic intelligence activities and believes President Richard M. Nixon was too. Mitchell told the Senate Intelligence Committee that while he was told in mid-1971 the CIA was conducting "mail covers" — noting the information on the outside of envelopes — he did not know agents were actually opening and reading letters. Mail covers are legal; mail opening is not.

Sara Moore indicted in murder attempt

A federal grand jury in San Francisco has indicted Sara Jane Moore on a charge of attempting to kill President Ford and she will appear in court next Tuesday for arraignment. It was announced Friday. The charge carries a possible sentence of life in prison. The 45-year-old twice married mother, accused of taking a shot at President Ford outside a San Francisco hotel Sept. 22, was secretly indicted Wednesday and the sealed indictment was filed in U.S. district court. Judge Samuel Conti ordered the document made public Friday. Miss Moore has been held in a federal medical facility in San Diego undergoing psychiatric tests to determine her mental competency since shortly after the incident. Her testing will be interrupted so she can be moved to San Francisco for arraignment and possibly to enter a plea. A trial date also could be set at the hearing.

In Sacramento, a federal judge Friday said he ordered President Ford to give videotaped testimony for the defense in the Lynette Fromme attempted assassination case because "no person, even a President, is above the law."

Turk envoy slain in Paris

PARIS (UPI) — Gunmen resembling the killers of the Turkish ambassador to Austria, assassinated Turkey's ambassador to France Friday in a lunchtime ambush in the heart of Paris.

Authorities speculated the killings were part of an international terrorist murder campaign — perhaps Armenian or Greek Cypriot in origin — against Turkish diplomats in Europe.

Police investigators said two dark-complected young men stepped into lunchtime traffic on Quai John F. Kennedy and pumped submachine gun fire into the limousine returning Turkish ambassador Ismail Erez from a diplomatic reception to his embassy.

Erez and his chauffeur were dead within minutes. Their assassins fled on foot.

The killing came only two days after Erez's friend and fellow ambassador, Turkish envoy to Austria Danis Tunaligil, was gunned to death in his office in Vienna.

The attackers in both cases were described by witnesses as swarthy, southern European men.

"The assassination of two Turkish ambassadors in Europe cannot be a coincidence," a high ranking police official here said. "We may be facing an international terrorist conspiracy."

Turkish embassy secretary Adnan Bozkurt, denouncing the "cowardly attack," told reporters French police had tightened security around the embassy after the Vienna slaying, but that a few hours before the attack ambassador Erez admitted "there is nothing that can be done against a determined assassin."

In Ankara, Turkish Foreign Minister Ihsan Sabri Caglayangil said, "We are facing an organized political assault against Turkey. We shall be taking whatever measures are possible to protect the lives of our diplomats abroad."

Premier Suleyman Demirel cut short a visit to his hometown of Istanbul and rushed back to Ankara to preside over an emergency cabinet meeting late Friday.

An anonymous telephone call from a supposed Armenian liberation group claimed responsibility for the Vienna shooting.

By coincidence, Erez was sent to Paris 11 months ago to smooth over a dispute arising from Turkey's treatment of Armenians. There has been high ill feeling between the two countries since the massacre of Armenians in Turkey during World War I.

No group immediately took responsibility for the Paris assassination.

Late Friday, a telephone caller claiming to be from the Greek Cypriot underground organization (EOKA) told the Austrian News Agency in Vienna that "EOKA has struck again in Paris."

The underground movement fought a guerrilla war for years on Cyprus in an effort to unite the island with Greece. Partly spurred by its activities, Turkey invaded Cyprus last year.

Adlai has plan to aid New York

U.S. Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., Tuesday will present his own proposals for rescuing New York City from its financial crisis to a Senate committee considering the issue.

Stevenson Friday blocked a proposal by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., which would have provided $8 billion in federal guaranteed loans to the city because he did not believe the loans would solve New York's problems, a Stevenson spokesman said.

The Proxmire bill was before the Senate Banking Committee, chaired by Proxmire. Stevenson's opposition to the bill dooms it because six Republican members of the 14-member committee are unanimously opposed to a loan guarantee for the city.

A spokesman for Stevenson said late Friday the senator "is not blocking aid to New York. He's trying to make sure that whatever federal bill, results will be helpful and not just delay the crisis for another year."

The aide said Stevenson favors federal legislation which would result in restructuring New York's debt by deferring some interest payments and turning short-term loans into long-term loans. Such debt restructuring is one probable result if the city actually goes bankrupt and defaults on its obligations.

"The senator is not advocating that New York be allowed to go to default," the aide said. "He thinks debt restructuring could be put into effect short of default. He is not ruling out some kind of federal loan guarantee to go along with that."

In other Washington activity related to New York Friday, senators on the Foreign Relations Committee attacked an administration proposal to send $20 million foreign aid to Zaire. The administration is opposing aid to New York City.

Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., said the African nation "ain't going to get one damn dime" until New York is helped. Sen. Jacob Javits, R-New York, said the proposal to aid Zaire "is the height of inconsistency, of callousness."

Zaire faces financial troubles because of a drop in world copper prices, the country's main export.

DAVE KORETOS, banquet manager at the Hyatt Regency O'Hare hotel, Rosemont, has a little fun with some of his Halloween creations.

'Friends' give $8,000 to N.Y.

Friendly folks have donated $8,000 to aid the plight of debt-ridden New York City. A $1,000 check arrived anonymously to Mayor Abraham D. Beame. "I'm praying for New York City," said one woman from Florida.

With court approval, Patricia Hearst's defense attorneys Friday sought to make arrangements for the newspaper heiress to receive "emergency" psychiatric treatment.

The women of Reykjavik, Iceland, went on strike Friday, shutting down factories, stores, communications and their own kitchens to draw attention to "their struggle for equality." In Hartford, Conn. Gov. Ella T. Grasso said the planned national women's strike next week may set the women's liberation movement back 20 years.

Sparta, Wis., is planning two days of festivities beginning next Friday to honor astronaut Donald Slayton, who grew up there. Slayton was one of three Americans to make the joint space flight with Soviet cosmonauts.

Old Madrid builders tell of payoffs to 2 officials

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The builders of the Old Madrid Apartments in Palatine paid two county officials about $92,500 to win high-density, multiple-family zoning for the controversial project, two government witnesses testified Friday in U.S. Dist. Court.

Comr. Floyd Cullen of Des Plaines received two cash payments, $10,000 and $20,000, to end county board delays of zoning for the 135-unit project at Northwest Highway west of Hicks Road in Palatine, contractor William J. Adams said.

Paul Marcy, secretary of the County Board of Appeals, was paid $55,000 in $100 bills to influence project zoning, Adams said during the fifth day of testimony in the trial of Fulle.

FULLE WAS indicted Feb. 13 on charges of extortion, tax fraud and perjury. One extortion count charges that Fulle received the $20,000 payoff in 1970 from Adams, who was acting for Selligren, Inc., developer of the apartments.

Marcy was not named in the Feb. 13 indictment which also included County Comr. Charles Bonk and County Zoning Administrator Bernard J. O'Brien.

U. S. Atty. Howard M. Hoffmann attempted to conceal Marcy's identity Friday. Hoffmann asked U.S. Dist. Court Judge Bernard M. Decker to prohibit witnesses and defense attorneys from naming or identifying Marcy.

WHEN DEFENSE attorney Arthur Zimmerman told Decker that Marcy is a subpoenaed defense witness, Hoffmann withdrew the motion.

Adams, a 69-year-old plumbing and heating contractor said he delivered the $55,000 to Marcy at County Zoning Board offices in the Civic Center June 27, 1970. The payoff followed a conversation in which Marcy allegedly rejected $40,000.

Marcy was not available for comment Friday.

Adams said he delivered $20,000 to Fulle at County Board offices June 15, 1970, prior to a board vote which increased the number of apartments to be built on the 66-acre project at Hicks and Baldwin roads.

SELLERGREN INC. purchased the property, known as the Pebble Creek Golf Course, in 1969 for $1.5 million. The land was zoned for construction of 500 apartment units.

The controversial Selligren proposal, which included 1,350 units, was criticized by local homeowner groups and the Village of Palatine filed formal objection to the zoning request.

County officials lost the village's objection petition. Absence of the objection reduced the number of votes needed to approve the zoning from three-fourths to one half.

Adams said he met Marcy in late 1969. "I told him that my client had a problem financially. I asked him if 55 big reasons would get the job done. He smiled and said he would look into it," Adams said.

WHEN FULLE twice deferred board consideration of the project, Adams arranged an appointment at Fulle's office. "I told him I was prepared to pay $20,000 to get the job done. He said he would look into it," Adams said.

Adams received the cash to pay Fulle from builder Howard Selligren in a county building washroom, he said.

"I dropped him (Fulle) the envelope and asked him how it looked. It looked like everything would be OK, thanks, I believe he said."

ADAMS SAID he was awarded a $600,000 contract to furnish plumbing for the apartment building.

About $93,000 — which is $3,000 more than Adams collected in cash from Selligren's officials for payoffs — of the plumbing contract — is unpaid, Adams said.

The William J. Adams Engineering firm has obtained a lien on the apartment project to collect the debt.

"Did you believe that Mr. Adams took the entire $90,000?" Zimmerman asked James Selligren. "No, sir," Selligren answered.

BOTH HOWARD and James Selligren said during cross-examination that they denied knowledge of the payoff when interviewed by Internal Revenue Service agents in 1974.

Neither of the Selligren's witnessed transfer of the money to Fulle.

Howard Selligren told the jury that $30,000 of the $90,000 came from his safety deposit box and was Las Vegas gambling winnings. Although Selligren accumulated as much as $20,000 in the bank box at various times, he said Friday that he paid no income taxes in 1969 and that he received a $4,700 refund.

New York's woes plunge Dow 14.64

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices Friday were sharply lower in fairly active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which gained 5.59 points Thursday, plunged 14.64 to 840.52. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 1.41 to 89.83. The price of an average NYSE share lost 43 cents.

Declines held a strong lead over advances, 890 to 515, among the 1,822 issues crossing the ticker.

Sales totaled 18,120,000 shares, compared with 17,900,000 shares traded Thursday.

The market, which had been lower in early trading, declined sharply after the Senate Banking Committee failed to reach agreement on a bill to provide guaranteed loans to New York.

TENNECO WARRANTS "A" led the Big Board actives, up 7-32 to 11-32 on 395,500 shares. A Tenneco unit and

Standard Oil of California, which lost 1 1/8 to 30 1/4 Thursday announced an oil find in California. Tenneco was second active, up 1/8 to 24 1/4 on 363,300 shares. Polaroid followed, off 1 1/2 to 5/8 on 285,700 shares.

The glamors, chemicals and blue chips were hard hit by the selling wave, which carried most major stock groups into minus territory.

Prices closed lower in moderately active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The price of an average Amex share lost six cents. Volume came to 1,815,000 shares, against 1,576,000 shares turned over Thursday.

Animals are Charlie's best friends

something when others are having a difficult time propagating them," he points out. "If someone doesn't help them propagate, there won't be any left."

He notes there is somewhat of a challenge in successfully breeding macaws because people have had trouble getting the birds to generate offspring. Hume adds he wants to keep endangered species such as Caropals, rare Australian geese and northern kitfoxes from extinction.

Other animals he has bred are Oriental pheasants, zebras, all types of deer, parrots, antelope, African and Hawaiian sheep, guinea pigs and knee-high African pigmy goats — the list continues.

HUME SAYS he thinks he was "born" to love animals. As a child in Missouri, he captured wild animals, hoping to tame them for pets. "I figure my folks thought I would end up in a zoo — on one side or the other of the bars."

He went to the University of Illinois, Urbana, where he earned degrees in zoology and mammalogy. It was there he took up the hobby of raising skunks, starting with one from a research project. Hume became an authority on skunks and later wrote a book about raising skunks. From there, he went to work for a pharmaceutical firm and began to raise guinea pigs.

Hume says he never dreamed his animal kingdom would grow this large. Jobs in the animal field are hard to find, he says, and many animal farms fail. Hume points to "diversification" in aiding his success.

In any given month, there may be as many as 15,000 young animals born — many of which are mice. Hume says he tries not to get attached to animals he knows will be leaving. Breeding is his purpose. "My main concern is they get the right food and the right environment."

BUT THERE ARE some that come close to Hume's heart. Besides Friendly and Louie, Hume favors his African grey parrot, Cleo, who possesses a mastery of the English language.

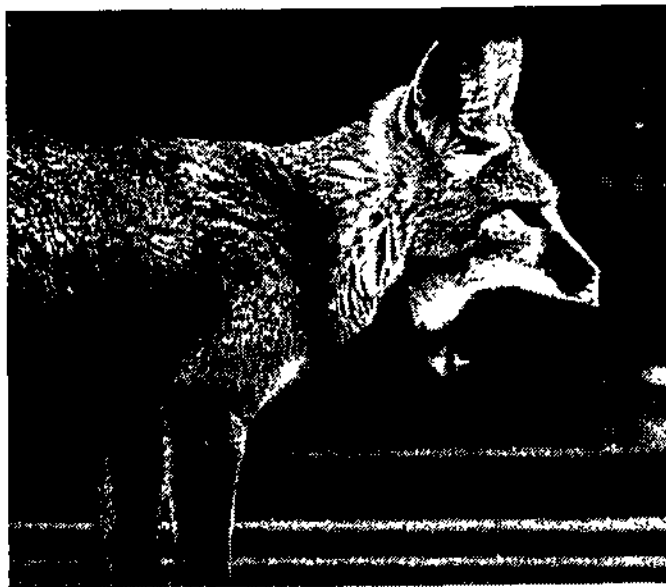

Hume says although he would love to open his animal paradise to the public, he allows visiting by appointment only.

It is a full-time job for him, seven days a week — with him often working late into the night. But he loves every second and wouldn't have it any other way.

Citizens unit hits walkway plan at Tarkington School

A member of a citizens' committee on health, safety and facilities in Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 Thursday night objected to the "deceitful and unresponsive manner" in which the district planned and built two recently-completed gravel walkways to Tarkington School.

Shelly Levine, 1509 Cedarwood Ln., a Lakeside Villa resident and secretary of the citizens' committee, distributed a letter to board members following her committee's report. The committee made recommendations for physically improving district schools and providing better health and safety services to students.

Mrs. Levine objected to the district's planning of the walkways from Lakeside Villa and Tahoe Village complexes without the knowledge of her committee.

"Had the committee been informed of such plans, I feel as a member that it would have recommended that such pathway represents an obvious hazard cause, as currently proposed, such a pathway represents an obvious hazard to the welfare and safety of the children of our community," she wrote.

BOARD MEMBERS voted to construct the $800 gravel walkway Oct. 9, a move which district officials say will save the district about $22,000 currently spent to bus those children to Tarkington School, 310 Sett St., Wheeling.

The walkways were strongly opposed by parents who said they posed too many safety hazards to children.

The pathways were recently completed and district officials say children will have to walk no farther than about three-quarters of a mile on the walkways to Tarkington. The district plans a meeting with parents Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. to explain new safety procedures on the pathway. Revised bus service to residents of Tahoe Village, Mallard Lake and Lakeside Villa will begin Nov. 3.

County zoners weigh Magnus battle

use, it could face a suit from Magnus.

And if the county board isn't able to muster the 3/4ths vote needed to make some zoning decision on the land, the property might end up as the only land in Cook County that is unzoned and could be developed any way the owner wishes.

ZONING BOARD chairman Alex Selth urged Magnus and the villages to reach a compromise before zoners are forced to make a decision.

But short of a compromise, the zoning board will meet Nov. 20 to decide on its recommendations for the property.

The final decision on how to zone the land is up to the county board of commissioners.

The legal mess is complicated because an existing covenant on the land which restricts its use to nursing homes and housing for the elderly may no longer apply because of recent legal precedents questioning the validity of covenants.

The villages, fearful that loss of the covenant could leave the land open for massive apartment development, filed a formal objection. That means 12 of the 16 board members must vote in favor of the R-7 zoning for it to go into effect.

If the county zoning board decides to recommend R-7 zoning on the property, it also could mean the county board would need 12 votes to veto the zoning board recommendation.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Village Atty. Jack Siegel said he thought if the county board failed to get 12 votes for either type of zoning the land would probably remain under the old county ordinance at 17 units.

But Selth said the old ordinance will be invalid. He said it was his opinion that unless the county board sets some zoning for the land it will be left with no zoning at all.

Some bottles are worth more if empty

Bottle collectors are legion, and no wonder, considering all the categories and sub-types which come under the general heading of "Bottles."

One could specialize in ancient bottles, that is, artifacts from before the Renaissance, but this is one area where one had better know his business. American bottles are always popular, including historical flasks, patent medicines, mineral and soda water, whiskey, pottery bottles and jugs, and the later Avons and Jim Beams.

Avon made and is still making thousands of different types of containers for its products, and some million people have been associated with the company, doing at front doors. Products of the parent company, California Perfume, which operated before 1929, bring high prices, but later Avons can still be purchased for a couple of dollars.

AVONS HAVE AN avid following, but until this group becomes more seasoned and the law of supply and demand determines stable values, I would think the idea of Avons as investment is extremely risky.

I know the flea markets are filled with Avon offerings and the only activity seems to be among the dealers themselves. (I sometimes get the feeling that antiques shows and flea markets are just dealer exchanges. That's why it's wise to get there early, while they are setting up if possible, in order to find your collectible before it has changed hands and prices several times.)

Jim Beam whiskeys, both ceramic and glass, have simmered down in interest, it seems to me, since that period in the '60s when one could buy any one of a series, filled at the liquor store, empty the contents and resell the container for more than the filled price. Like eating your cake (or drinking your booze) and having it too.

THERE IS ONE category of bottle collecting today — perhaps the only one, as I think of it — where the containers were always purchased empty, and that is the fruit jar. They were used for home preserving and the jars were preserved too, from generation to generation, and may be found today in basements of almost any old home. They may not even be very old, for during the Depression home canning became very popular, as it did again during World War II and Victory Gardens.

Today, once again, there is a revival of interest in home canning (witness the shortage of canning lids this season!). Now, old jars are being hauled out of cellars or bought at auction for use, not just decor.

If you can't can, you can collect, but the jars vary greatly in scarcity and price. Twenty-five cents is probably enough to pay for the great majority of them, but rarities can bring up to $100 or more. Any jar in amber color is a prize, for Grandma didn't put up her pickles for the county fair in amber — that would have distorted the beautiful color. Therefore, there are fewer amber and other colored jars around than the clear.

THE PALE blue-aqua can still be found, such as Ball Improved Mason Patent 1858, which lists in my price guide at $4. I have found these for less at house sales, however. The 1858 is not a date for the jar, remember — simply the patent.

The one amber jar in our collection was discovered by the beady-eyed daughter, then about 11 years old, in the basement rummage sale of an old home in Arlington Heights. In the fruit cellar among shelves and shelves of dusty jars filled with someone's canning labors from years back, she found a jar which seemed to be filled with faded crab apples. All the jars were priced at 25 cents, and so she took it home, emptied the contents, washed it and sure enough, it was a Trade Mark Lightning, Putnam, amber jar, now priced in the guide at about $35. She threatens to carry it off when she establishes a home of her own.

(Write me, enclosing SASE, for the names of canning jar booklets and price guides, or if you have any other questions. Address Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, in care of Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 250, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60004.)

Sexist ads damage credibility, they say

Stewardesses make their own commercial

Stewardesses are asking air travelers to listen to them and take them seriously and not just ogle them as a "brainless sex object."

At a national conference of Stewardesses for Women's Rights in New York, conference coordinator Cynthia Glockman said "sexist advertising" such as National Airlines' "Fly me" campaign has created an image of a stewardess as a sex object.

She said this attitude damages their credibility when they give instructions during an emergency.

"We allege that sexist airline advertising is a threat to airline safety," Ms. Glockman said. "Stewardesses for Women's Rights is inaugurating a counter advertising campaign."

She said the first such "commercial" has been filmed and tentatively will be presented on the Public Broadcasting Service's "Women Alive" program.

The commercial shows an attractive stewardess standing at a desk by a tape recorder which plays the sound of a jetliner taking off, then crashing.

"What you have just heard is the sound of a jet plane crashing," the stewardess says. "I'm a stewardess and it's alarming how few passengers listen to me, when, at the beginning of every flight, I point out various pieces of equipment and explain certain emergency procedures."

"I don't do this to frighten you or bore you. I do it as a reminder that should an emergency occur, your cooperation is essential."

"There are some of you who insist on clinging to the fantasy that as a stewardess, I am nothing more than a brainless sex object," the stewardess adds. "To ignore my instructions because of fear, or the belief that I have nothing important to say, is insulting to me and potentially dangerous to you."

"When you are on an airplane, I'm responsible for your safety, and I take that responsibility seriously."

Ms. Glockman said that once after an emergency landing, a "big guy like a football captain" interfered with a stewardess who was directing the evacuation of the aircraft.

"She was standing in the doorway, controlling the flow of people down an inflatable slide," she said. "Then this big guy comes up, picks her up and throws her down the slide, saying 'You're much too cute to stay here.'"

FDA proposal to require drained weight on labels

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

The Food and Drug Administration has announced plans to require that the drained weight of canned fruits and vegetables be declared on the products' labels.

The measure had been requested by Consumers Union, publishers of Consumer Reports, in a petition to the FDA.

Current regulations require only net weight on food labels, a practice which Consumers Union says is "virtually useless as a buying yardstick."

Drained weight is the actual amount of food in a can, while net weight includes the water, syrup or other liquid in which the food is packed.

IN 1972 CONSUMERS Union reported on a study of net weights versus drained weights of canned and frozen fruits and vegetables. CU found that frozen food packages almost always contained as much or more as their labeled net weight, with the exception of leaf spinach, while canned items all fell considerably short of the mark.

For example, pound cans of sliced peaches contained as little as 9 1/2 ounces of peaches. Libby's fruit cocktail in heavy syrup, labeled 17 ounces, contained 11.9 ounces drained; Del Monte peach halves, 16-ounce can, contained 9.8 ounces; Dole pineapple chunks in syrup, 20-ounce can contained 13 ounces; Sunsweet prunes, 16-ounce can, contained 7.8 ounces.

In vegetables, Green Giant asparagus, 15-ounce can, contained 9.2 ounces; Del Monte family style corn, 17-ounce can, contained 11 ounces.

BY COMPARISON, Birds Eye frozen corn, 10-ounce package, contained 10.2 ounces, and A&P frozen asparagus, 10-ounce package, contained 10.5 ounces.

The National Canners Association, which has opposed the idea of drained weight labeling in the past, claims that the liquids in canned foods are a nutritional part of the food and should be consumed. They add that drained weight varies considerably from can to can and changes over time, as fruits absorb the sugars in the liquid.

But according to Peter Schuck, director of CU's legislative activities, "There is no technical reason why it (drained weight labeling) can't be done."

CU pointed out in 1972 that the Department of Agriculture already had established drained-weight recommendations for a number of foods as part of its voluntary grade-standard program. CU suggested that labels "could declare packing weight, as policed by USDA, without liquid or syrup added in."

THE FDA PROPOSAL would require that both net weight and drained weight appear on the labels of foods whose juices are normally consumed — such as canned peaches. But drained weight only must appear on labels of foods whose liquid is normally thrown away — such as olives.

The proposal would also set minimum amounts of solid food that must be contained in canned fruits and vegetables.

The FDA will seek data from both industry and consumers on whether the economic benefits to consumers will outweigh any increases in product costs as a result of the labeling requirement.

Comments on the proposal may be sent to the Office of the FDA Hearing Clerk, Room 4-08, 8000 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md. 20852.

COVERED WITH BADGES, teenagers are ready to go door-to-door and to shopping centers in the Northwest suburbs Monday through next Sunday, asking donations for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis and affiliate in Peoria. Founded by Danny Thomas, St. Jude treats children with

These are marked on the pattern and instituted when the fabric is cut. She will also show the right and wrong way of cutting, sewing and fitting.

The sew-fit method is based on a series of 10 steps worked out by Ruth Oblander, who teaches sewing and fitting.

Reader tells secrets of batter frying

Dear Dorothy: I read your answer on how to cook the Japanese way of deep frying batter-dipped foods with interest. My mother gave me three major tips — the secret of making batter-dipped foods light and crispy. They are (1) use ice-cold water to make the batter — or put two ice cubes in the batter; (2) don't mix the batter well — when the flour becomes wet, that's enough; (3) the temperature of the oil is vitally important. Drop a small amount of batter in the oil. If it goes all the way to the bottom before coming up, the temperature is too low. If the batter scatters on the surface, it is too hot. The temperature is just right when the batter goes down to the middle and comes up. —Takako Wakita

Dear Dorothy: My Dracena Marginata seems to be doing fine, but the tips on many of the fronds have turned brown. Is there something I might be doing wrong? —Marie Graebner

The homeline

by Dorothy Ritz

The Dracena is a lovely, tall house tree, but it needs good humidity and the fronds will do this when the air is too dry. Try moving it farther away from the heat. If the brown tips bother you, trim them. I did with mine.

Dear Dorothy: We really pulled a boner, and I'm writing to caution others. We couldn't find a tarpaulin to cover the suitcases on top of the car when we left on our summer vacation and then forgot to do anything about it when coming home. Steady rain for about 100 miles of the return journey made a mess of the insides of the two cases. —Mrs. Jonathan Rogers

Woman's club fetes its 15th birthday

All members, past and present, of Schaumburg Woman's Club are invited to a reunion to celebrate the 15th anniversary of the club.

Former members who have not been contacted are encouraged to join the party Monday, Nov. 3, at 8 p.m. in Christ the King Lutheran Church, Schaumburg.

The special program for the evening will be an art show featuring Margaret A. Gardner of Des Plaines.

THE NEWEST members to attend the anniversary meeting will be Marge Harrington, Doris Murray, Marianne Nadherny, Sue Slinmerer and Pat Jacobozzi. They were installed at the club's October meeting. Further information on membership is available at 894-3526.

grapefruit is one that is smooth-skinned, heavy and speckled with dark spots.

I was given a quantity of beautiful tomatoes and, not knowing what else to do with them, thought I'd try freezing them for future use. I cut them in quarters and eighths (with the skins on) and placed them on waxed paper on a cookie sheet — and put the tray in the freezer. As soon as they were frozen, I put all the pieces in a plastic bag and stored them back in the freezer. The pieces not only do beautifully in cooking, but I find they are even fine when tossed in a fresh salad. —Bernadette McLaughlin

Dear Dorothy: I'm on a low-cholesterol diet and have been going on the assumption that all fats came from plants were unsaturated. I've just read that this isn't so, but the article offered no further explanation. I'm puzzled. —H. F. Fortreau

The way we see it

School needs traffic light

Efforts to install a traffic light on Higgins Road near Hoffman Estates High School are being blocked by the state because of what it calls "insufficient traffic volume."

We do not agree with the state and urge officials to take immediate steps to get a traffic signal installed at the intersection as soon as possible.

Parents are concerned with the safety of students attending the school because the youths must cross the highway which has a posted speed of 50 miles per hour.

Traffic along the roadway also has increased during the last month with the closing of Golf Road, between Higgins and Barrington roads, for construction. Because of this situation, we also are calling for police officials to help direct traffic throughout the school day rather than just peak periods as they do now.

The state has jurisdiction in the matter because Higgins Road is a state thoroughfare. Hoffman Estates officials estimate the signal will cost $50,000 while the state estimated $80,000.

A commitment for some funds has come from Lincoln Federal Savings and Loan Assn., which is located across from the school and whose customers would benefit from the signal. The village would have to pay the rest.

We also suggest that if and when a signal is installed at the intersection it be a "pressure type" that would change with the flow of traffic, both motor and pedestrian, which crosses Higgins Road. With this type of equipment, traffic along Higgins Road only would be delayed when absolutely necessary.

Motorists traveling Higgins Road should give special attention to the situation near Hoffman Estates High School. Signs are posted near the school warning motorists to reduce their speeds to 20 miles per hour while school is in session. According to students and area residents, this limit seldom is obeyed.

The need for stronger safety precautions in the school area is a must, before it is too late and someone is seriously injured or killed.

Court reform needed

Reading criticism of our criminal justice system is like watching "Gone With the Wind" over and over again. You know there's validity and truth in it, but it's a bit boring because you've memorized the script.

The latest critique of county justice comes from the League of Women Voters of Illinois and the Illinois Court Watchdog Project, which studied 16 Chicago and suburban courtrooms and 26,000 cases between March 3 and May 16.

Terms such as "assembly-line justice," "inefficiency" and "unfairness" pepper the report. Although such words are accurate in describing our courtroom system, they've been written many times before by other conscientious critics.

The suburban courtrooms are "better" than their Chicago counterparts, concludes the report, but it also finds they "contrast unfavorably" with courtrooms in Warren and Champaign counties. On the basis of these remarks, there is little room for complacency about courtroom justice in the suburbs.

As in "Gone With the Wind," the ending is familiar; we need more judges, more courtrooms and more court personnel. Most of all, however, we need lots of money to improve the system.

But until we realize that an ineffective system of justice will eventually harm us, little will change. As Scarlett O'Hara says at the end of the movie, "I'll think about that tomorrow." Until we decide to do something about justice TODAY, nothing will change in Cook County.

Good judge of distance, reflexes sharp, runs quick!
OK, you cross Higgins at Gannon!!

'Dist. 54 strike was unnecessary'

As a teacher who did not believe the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 strike was necessary at this time, I would like to convey my opinion.

I regret I was not present when the request for the minority opinion came from The Herald newspaper person. I feel that though it may be a minority opinion, the community should hear both sides concerning the "even" split that occurred at Keller Junior High School. The community should be aware that "half" the teachers at Keller believed a negotiated settlement could have been reached. "Half" of the staff can in no way be construed to mean a "skeleton crew" as reported by The Herald.

As a parent and taxpayer in this community I fail to see the reasoning behind the sudden concern the S.E.A. now shows for students "after the fact." I also cannot condone the use of the words "local superstar" in the eyes of his students to describe the actions of a leader who claims to have avoided the strike at all cost. I don't appreciate my children being used as pawns in adult "kiddie" games.

I can honestly say that the teachers who chose not to strike are also less than enchanted with the school board and some of its actions and insinuations. Some of us were not so disenchanted as to cut off our noses to spite our faces. We chose instead to observe very closely the lies being perpetrated by both sides (board and S.E.A.) before making our commitment.

Where does this all end? That, fellow parents, involves you. The tremendous apathy displayed by parents in this community must end. Voter turnouts for school board elections and attendance at school board meetings are the most obvious signs of apathy in this community. All parents should surely realize by now where the majority of their tax dollar is spent. It is spent to obtain the finest education money can buy for your children. Dist. 54 has, in my opinion, some of the finest teachers ever assembled on any teaching staff in this country. But without parental involvement and careful scrutinizing of those who are elected to make major decisions concerning this school district (school board), these conflicts will continue and will soon become an ugly part of everyday life in this community.

Palatine Homecoming news hit

Many students were very disappointed with your coverage of Palatine High's Homecoming festivities. I think it's humiliating on your part that other newspapers, some non-local, can show the excitement felt better than our own town's.

It's only right that you should report activities happening at all schools, but this year was a special one being it was a part of our centennial celebration. For more people, a centennial anniversary is a once-in-a-lifetime event. The students, teachers, and parents are all helping in making this year special, and Homecoming was special. But then, The Herald didn't seem to notice. Didn't Palatine also have a queen? How about spirited crowds on bleachers? Wasn't the parade supposed to be the biggest and best parade to be put together for the past several years? Isn't Homecoming a special event in every school? To Palatine High... the answer to those questions is yes.

Why is it then that The Herald seems to overlook Palatine High so often? Have you forgotten about us? Homecoming was just one example. Many times, people would look forward to seeing things in the paper. One time when Friends and Palatine played a football game against each other, the Pirates happened to win. The headline the next morning was not "Pirates win," but "Vikings lose." This sort of coverage is degrading to the school, its people, but most of all its spirit. If it keeps up, the school spirit will eventually die. Would you like to have a death on your conscience?

Theatre support endorsed

We in the community appreciate news of all the activities in the schools. There are so many exciting things there today that we hear too little about. Curricula are established to produce well-rounded individuals and newspaper coverage encourages young people to strive for excellence in their individual pursuits, hence I especially appreciate your articles on high school plays.

Theatre has held a unique position of importance in societies dating back to primitive times and developing through to our own day. Originally it served a powerful religious purpose; but in modern times we tend to view theatre as entertainment, actually this isn't so.

Writers through the centuries have sought to teach, inspire and ennoble men. Too often today the theatre jingles to box office receipts, encouraging the production of frothy, banal fare.

There is no greater tool to knowledge of the verities than the playwright's pen. Our schools are now fertile fields in which the seeds of drama can flower and bear fruit. Your support is crucial.

'Restrictive' gun laws hit

I applaud the letter by Mr. Solano in the Wednesday, Oct. 8 Herald about the irrationality of another overly restrictive firearms law. His points are well taken. The leniency of the judicial system in punishing criminals is a key problem, regardless of whether or not the crime was committed with the aid of a weapon.

There is an acute crime problem with which we are failing to deal because judicial leniency is causing ineffective punishment. Some people incorrectly associate the crime problem with a "gun problem." In reality guns are not a cause of crime. Crime was present long before guns were invented. In attacking guns, these people are attempting to cure the patient by treating a symptom and not the disease; the recent increase in crime is largely due to ineffective punishment, not the availability of guns.

I think that many people join Mr. Solano in thanking God for the National Rifle Association. The most effective way to support the NRA and the ideas set forth in the Second Amendment to the Constitution is to join the NRA. In this way, you can be sure that your voice will be heard in a united front to oppose the fallacious arguments of the anti-gun organizations.

The National Rifle Association in recent years has been instrumental in disseminating truth in the face of copious anti-gun propaganda. About a year ago, they registered as a lobby and have had some success in the legislative arena. A new member drive is currently underway. If you support the right of law-abiding citizens to own firearms and the stricter punishment of criminals, joining the NRA will make your support more effective!

Storm windows poop out Dorothy

by DOROTHY MEYER

I know that the formula for remembering what to do with my clocks tonight has something to do with springing forward and falling behind, but I can never remember which one means that I get an extra hour of sleep.

And it's the sleep that's important as far as I'm concerned — I'm so tired I may not even wait to set my clock back.

Most of my poopedness is due to storm windows.

This year they not only need putting up, they needed putting up plus painted which I started to do last weekend. That's a terrible way to spend a weekend, an opinion son John now shares because he dropped in to say hello right after I found some putty in the basement.

Right after he said hello he said what are you doing and I said puttying a storm window, what does it look like I'm doing.

Then he asked what are you using for putty and I told him this stuff which looks like old mayonnaise and it must be putty because I recall that putty strongly resembles old mayonnaise.

Dorothy Meyer

John took a closer look at the stuff, sniffed it and gave me a pitying look.

"Mother, this IS old mayonnaise." "Don't be silly," I said, "What would old mayonnaise be doing in the basement?" and then I knew that was a foolish question.

Nevertheless John answered it. "The same thing all that other crud is doing in the basement, I suppose — why don't you start throwing it out while I go buy some genuine putty."

"If I throw it out you'll holler — half of that crud is yours, you know."

"Not half, Mother, only one-third — you have three children, remember?"

So we went down to the basement where John acknowledged the fact that the proportion of litter seemed to be in his favor.

But he didn't do anything about it and neither did I, because storm windows don't putty and paint themselves, and that's the way it always goes whenever we're in danger of doing something about that basement.

Now the windows are done except for scraping all the paint off the glass and washing them and hanging them.

I get tired just thinking about it and John has promised that he will not help because he hates washing windows almost as much as I do.

Recently I read that many birds are killed every year, smashing into freshly washed windows that are so clean the birds don't know they're there. Although the bird mortality rate around my windows has been zero except for one old-startling with cataracts, I think I will be kind to my fine feathered friends and leave the windows as is.

It will also make Halloween window-seepers think that somebody beat them to it.

Ask Andy

Kit fox—nature's artful dodger

Andy sends a complete 26-volume set of the Merit Student Encyclopedia to Loretta Seabrook, age 16, of Youngstown, Ohio, for her question:

WHAT KIND OF ANIMAL IS A KIT FOX?

You might mistake him for a teenage runaway, for he resembles the gray and red foxes in almost everything but size. No doubt he was named the kit fox because of his kittenish size, though it should be noted that young foxes prefer to be called cubs.

The charming little kit fox belongs to North America, though even here he is seldom seen. Ecologists rate him as one of our rarest mammals, and they would like to know more about him. His favorite haunts are the Western prairies and the desert regions.

His total length, including his foxy tail, is about 20 inches. His total weight is about five pounds, which is half as heavy as a red or gray fox. He has a grayish buff coat, extra-large ears and usually a black tip at the end of his bushy tail. He has a foxy face but not the foxy character of his larger cousins.

Actually the kit fox is a friendly fellow, too trusting for his own good. Often he walks right into a trap that the cunning red fox would avoid. However, the kit fox can take good care of himself, and he fills an important role in the ecology.

Like all members of the wild dog family he is by nature a meat eater, though people have caught him eating grass and some suspect that he may enjoy fruit for dessert. Unlike other foxes, he is a creature of the night, when he comes forth to dine on mice and other ratty rodents, chipmunks and cottontails. He also enjoys beetles and grasshoppers and once in a while a bite of snake or lizard meat.

All foxes live in dens, but the kit fox is a better digger than his relatives. The burrow where he spends the day has several exits, where he scoots to safety when pursued by hungry eagles or coyotes. It serves as bedroom and dining room, often littered with leftover bones.

The small, big-eared fox runs faster than other foxes and he is an artful dodger. At full speed, he zigzags at sharp angles to confuse his foes—then suddenly disappears down one of his secret holes.

In early spring, the female kit fox bears from two to seven helpless cubs. She nurses them for 10 weeks, then the devoted father helps to bring home the groceries. Both parents train and educate the playful young foxes until they are ready to go off on their own.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Mary Ellen Marino, age 10, of Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., Canada, for her question:

WHICH WAS THE FIERCEST PRE-HISTORIC ANIMAL?

Most experts agree that he was a mighty dinosaur. They named him Tyrannosaurus, which means the cruel tyrant. His fossil bones have been found in North America. Here, 100 million years ago, he strode around on his gigantic hind legs, trailing his gigantic tail. Larger animals and maybe fiercer have lived in the sea. But as far as we know, Tyrannosaurus was the largest meat-eating animal that lived on the land.

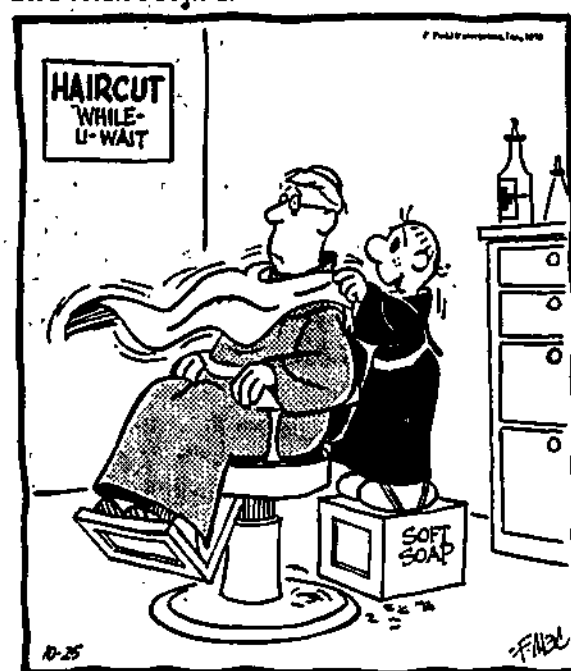

He stood up, dangling his smallish arms, to a height of 20 feet, taller than our skyscraper giraffe. His body, including his enormous tail, was 50 feet long and he weighed 10 tons. His huge boxy head was four feet long and his jaws were filled with terrible teeth, as sharp as daggers and six inches long. Tyrannosaurus was famished and fierce. He could run fast, grab and claw, and most of his victims were other dinosaurs, large and small. So far as we know, he was the most ferocious of all the prehistoric animals. Thank goodness he departed from the earth more than 70 million years ago.

George Kennedy stars in 'The Blue Knight'

NEW YORK (UPI)—George Kennedy starts shooting "The Blue Knight" Tuesday, after collecting a pile of money from CBS for not playing "The Blue Knight."

In one of those incidents that emphasizes how small screen entertainment means big money business, CBS had an option on the televised version of the Joseph Wambaugh police novel. The option expired last May 1.

"I was surprised and quite disappointed when the option wasn't picked up," Kennedy said in an interview. Two days later, on May 3, CBS called him.

"We goofed," Kennedy said network officials admitted. "Can we pay you to stand by?" He agreed and he said, "They have paid me a whole bunch of money to stand by, a whopping amount."

Even CBS doesn't indefinitely dole out money for not working, now it hopes to collect on its investment in Kennedy by putting "The Blue Knight" on the air starting Dec. 17 on Wednesday night from 10-11 Eastern time, replacing "Kate McShane." Kennedy plays the series hero, a beat cop named Bumper Morgan, and the network hopes it will be a big winner.

It's competition will be NBC's "Petrocelli" and ABC's new and popular cop team, "Starsky and Hutch." From what Kennedy said, "The Blue Knight" will be a different breed of cop.

"This is not a cop show like... well, pick your TV cop show," the big, blond and amiably bear-like Kennedy said. "These will be stories about a man who happens to be a cop, a beat cop. And not a beat cop like in the old Pat O'Brien movies."

"There isn't one single car chase in any of the scripts I've read. We aren't going to have 12 weeks of screeching tires. Instead we intend to tell stories."

Kennedy's character, and that of a skid row bum, are the only ones to recur in each episode, he said, but that might change.

"I look at this face every day," he said, "and I know just how beautiful it is. I also know just how beautiful it ain't. So my suggestion is that ultimately we might include a recurring family—not a wife or love interest but to give the guy with the can of beer in front of the set something pretty to look at."

Weather surrounds girls tennis with questions

The weatherman played havoc with the Illinois High School Association's girls state tennis tournament Friday as the early rounds of the event were washed indoors.

The status of the tournament remains shackled to the foibles of the wind and rain but Mary Lou Hundt, the head coach at Arlington and director of the tournament, is putting up a positive front.

"My girls will be out here at 7:30 tomorrow morning pushing water," Hundt said, "and we hope to play here at Arlington starting at 9 a.m."

"If it rains we'll have to start trying to find indoor courts."

The players in the tournament found enough dry space around the area Friday to get the early rounds completed and Suzie Replogle, the defending state singles champion, performed in a most defensive manner.

Replogle, the top-seeded player in the tournament, blasted Carol Kay of Bowen High School in the first round 6-0, 6-0 and extended her domination to the second round where Mary Huizenga of Lyons fell 6-1, 6-1. Replogle marched to the quarter finals with a 6-0, 6-0 win over Lincoln's Julie Harris.

Huizenga had earned her shot at the state champion by ousting Arlington's lone singles entrant, Leslie Grabitz 7-5, 6-1 in the first round.

Lisa Smart advanced the furthest of area's singles players. The Buffalo Grove freshman best Lori Galsford of Galesburg 4-1, 3-1 in the first round but lost to powerful Kathy Karzen, a solid contender for the state crown from New Trier West, in the second round 6-2, 6-0.

Rolling Meadows' Barb Gallo dropped a first round match with Corinne Neviny of Lake Forest 6-3, 6-2 while Clare Dowling of Hoffman Estates lost her first round contest with Sherri Stegman of Quincy Notre Dame 6-2, 6-3.

Arlington's senior doubles tandem of Mary Flynn and Maureen Coleman fared well until they ran up against Beth McLaughlin and Marsha Bladel, of Rock Island, the defending state doubles champions.

The Arlington pair moved through the first round with a 6-3, 6-1 win over a Champaign Central entrant and then moved to the third round by defeating LeBeau and Finnagan of Peoria Richwoods, 6-0, 6-0.

The Rock Island pair were waiting for them in the third round, though, and despite a solid performance by Flynn and Coleman the surgical ball placements of the defending champs sent the Cardinals packing 7-5, 6-2.

Heidi Giesler and Linda Warder of Fremd won their first round test with Lane's Montgomery and Levonyak 6-4, 6-3 but lost in the second round to Blanchard and Kazarian of Lake Forest 6-4, 6-2.

Fremd's other doubles entry, Kathy Pfander and Kim Whitting, lost in the first round to Kathy Porter and Sharon Wilson of Joliet East 6-2, 6-2.

Cindy Kaegle and Jenny Jimenez of Rolling Meadows were paired in the first round with Oak Park River Forest's Lynne Elbert and Mary Ann Nelson, champions of the Oak Park district, and lost 6-1, 6-0.

Lions reach state tourney with 4-0 win

Blocked punt, safety settle dramatic battle

by MIKE KLEIN

Vince Hall performed just exactly how Wayne Fiedler had designed his blocked punt. And Scott Zetek didn't need to ask anyone how you should play defensive middle guard, even though he was new to the position.

It meant that St. Viator's Lions trooped away from Robert E. Haskell Stadium in Elk Grove Friday evening as champions of the East Suburban Catholic football kingdom.

Hall's first quarter blocked punt, which sent Don Popravak's kick past the west endzone line, gave St. Viator a 2-0 lead. They added a third quarter safety and the final score was 4-0.

Even though the game started almost one hour late, and despite miserable field conditions after the day and early evening downpours, this match-up between St. Viator and deSales produced enough exciting moments that it should rank as one of the area's greatest games ever.

That's mostly because of what it meant to the Lions who will join Hershey and Schaumburg in the Mid-Suburban League when all three advance to IHSA Class 5A playoffs which begin on Wednesday, Nov. 5.

But there was so much more satisfaction. Such as knocking off deSales which last year gave Viator its first defeat after seven straight wins.

And it was especially gratifying to defeat the Pioneers after three straight losses. And knowing that deSales leaves the East Suburban Catholic next year.

The shutout victory also enabled Viator to attain head coach Jim Lyne's preseason goal of allowing ESCC teams 36 or fewer points.

Enroute to their 5-1 championship record, the Lions yielded just 28 points and they've now gained shutouts in four of their past five games.

deSales' Pioneers left Haskell Stadium with a 4-1 conference record and complete their ESCC season next week against Marist. But win or lose, the conference title belongs to Viator. And deservedly so.

Field conditions, which resembled a kettle of mud soup, were no great shakes at Haskell Stadium. But it was Viator which worked those factors to its favor, unlike three seasons ago when deSales won a 6-2 mud bath from the Lions.

The teams combined for nine fumbles. But Viator lost just one of four, quarterback Lou Citro saving the other three. deSales lost four of its five, three in the second half.

Dan Young had a first quarter fumble recovery. Rich Somers, Zetek and Nick Josten all swept up deSales fumbles after halftime.

Hall's blocked punt came at 10:41 of the second period, deSales with fourth down on its two-yard line. Charging from the right side, Hall batted away southpaw kicker Popravak's attempt.

It was a way-too-high center snap by deSales' Rick Gonz which led to Viator's third period safety. Popravak never got control of the ball. He was swarmed upon by Zetek, Young, Terry Frett and Larry Bruck.

There were just three sustained marches all night. After Young's first quarter fumble recovery, Viator moved 20 yards to deSales' five before John Gillen fumbled.

The Pioneers' only drive opened the second half. Moving from their own 32, deSales reached Viator's 32 before Frett deflected a pass on fourth and nine.

Viator began its last march of any length. With Gillen rushing 27 yards in four attempts, the Lions reached deSales' 10-yard line. But Citro's third and fourth down passes for Bill Deal and Kevin McAleer were deflected.

It was the Lions' awe inspiring defense which brought the crowd continually to its feet. deSales gained only 47 yards total offense (Viator had 72). Pioneer runners were stopped behind scrimmage 14 times for minus 56 yards.

Much of that ferocity was caused by playing Zetek at middle guard in a five-man line which featured tackles Dave Nicolau and Dan Young plus outside linebackers Larry Bruck and Tom Murray.

Defensive coordinator Fiedler chose 6-foot-5, 232-pound Zetek over 6-2, 200-pound Young for middle guard. Later, he liked that choice.

"We knew they'd have to use two men to block either Zetek or Young," said Fiedler. "Scotty was a good choice because of his size and especially in this rain."

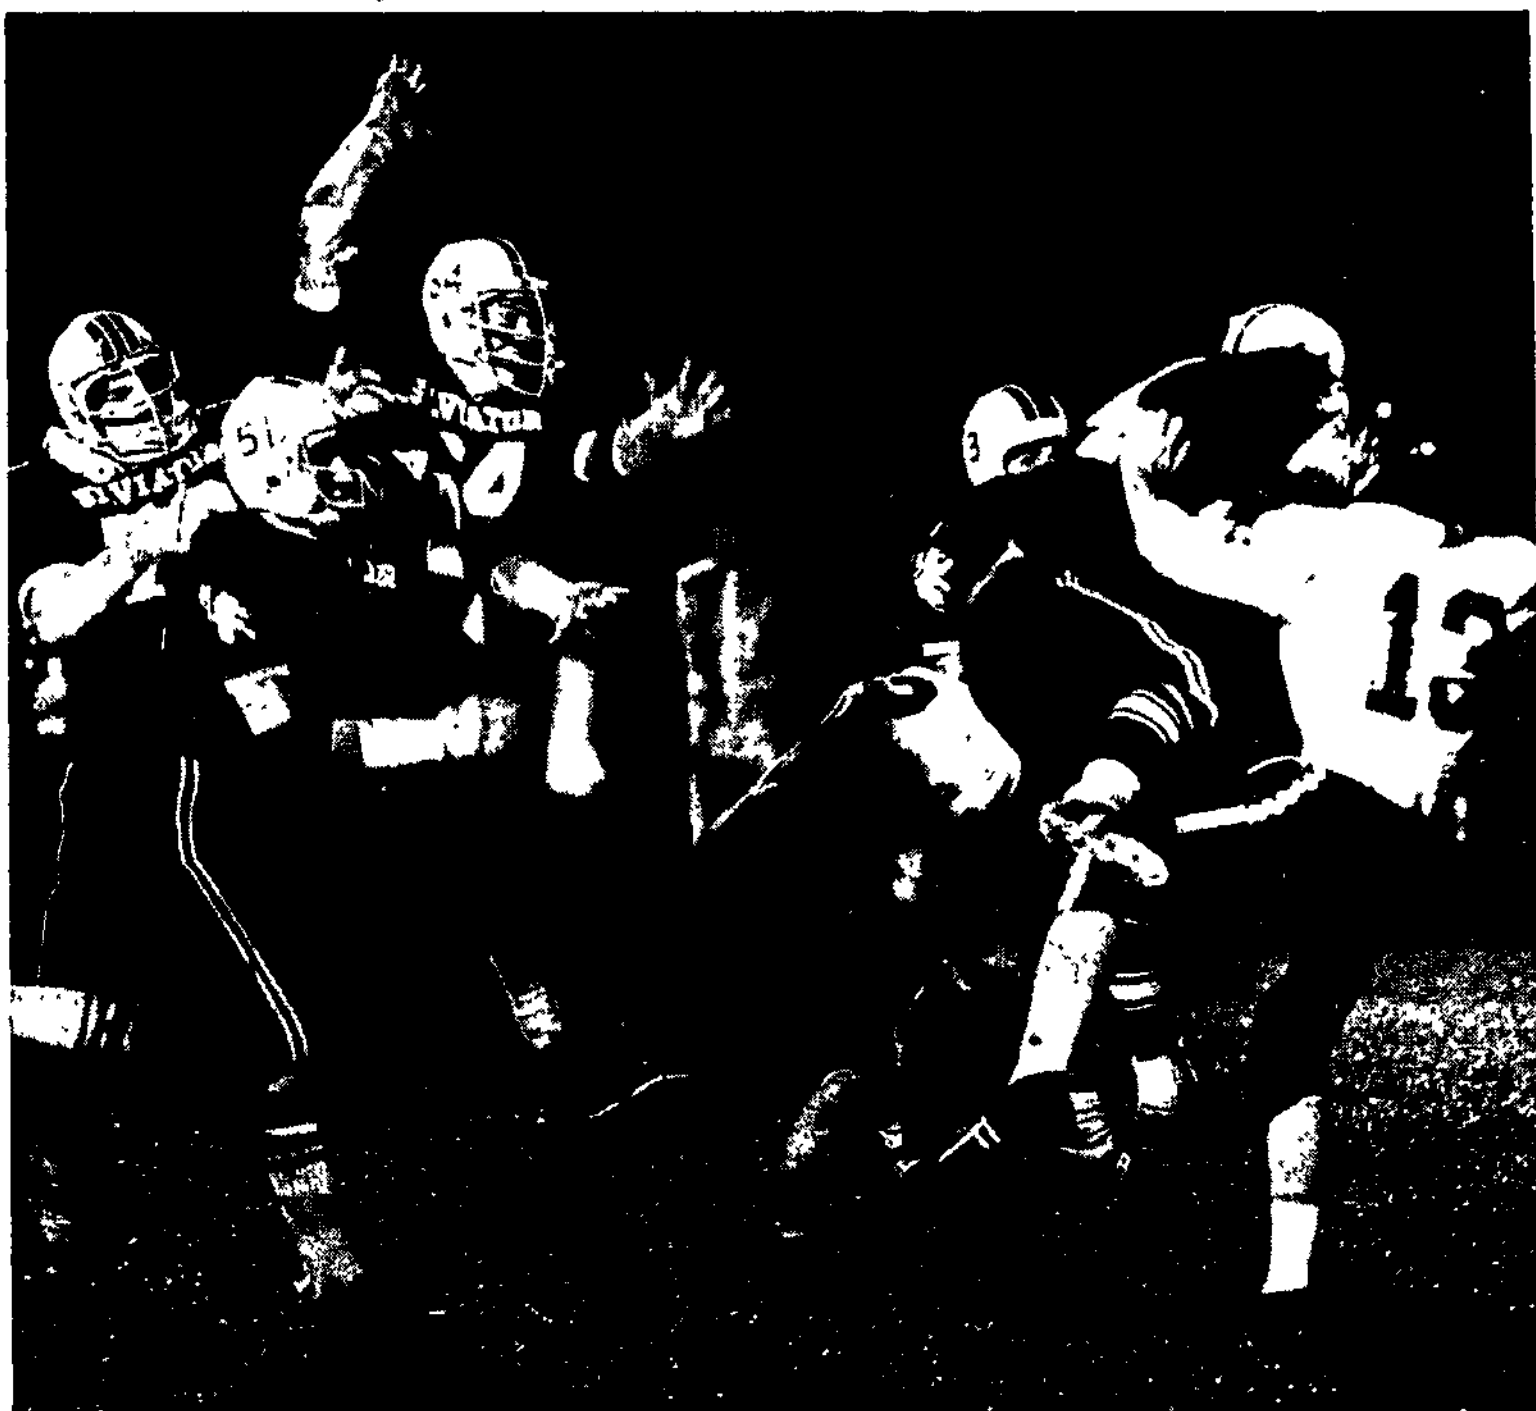

"I wasn't worried about Scott's quickness," said Fiedler. "Scott is as quick as you ever need."

Viator head coach Lyne, who insists defense must take priority over offense in high school football, said, "Defense did one helluva job. That's a five-man front with a three-man rush."

"We figured we had to get the good pass rush," said Lyne. "We've played this 52 defense before, the last couple weeks."

It worked perfectly Friday night.

Harper hopes to keep The Prop today

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

In the course of a 2-4 season, incentive is clutched where you can find it and the Triton Trojans, who are enduring such a campaign, will find all the incentive they need when they meet Harper on the Hawks' field today at 1:30.

First of all, Triton will relish the chance of knocking off one of the state's better teams as well as drying up the Hawks' misty hopes of tying for the N4C conference championship.

And, of course, there is The Prop. Somewhere there is a small single engine plane that can't fly because the propeller is missing. Harper has it. Triton wants it back. The Hawks grounded Triton last year, 35-28, and made off with the blade.

"Triton will really be after us because we have more to lose," said Harper's John Ellask. "We still have a mathematical chance to tie for the conference championship as well as finishing second in the state."

"We also want our third straight winning season and we finish with three very tough teams. I think Triton will really get up for a chance to beat a team which still has something riding on their season."

The unbeaten DuPage Chaparrals were aided by Harper mistakes in shutting down the Hawks 13-3 last Saturday.

"We knew we had dropped a lot of passes out until we looked at the films," Ellask said, "we didn't realize how important they were. Here's an interesting statistic. Each of the seven passes we dropped would have gone for first downs if they had been caught."

"Losing that kind of yardage really hurt."

Another ache came on the defense where a combination of DuPage running and Harper tackling, or lack of it, added up to 203 yards on the ground for the Chaps.

"Looking at the films I had one of my assistant coaches count the number of missed tackles," Ellask recalled. "He got to 26 and then I told him to stop. I think the fact DuPage's runners were so strong had something to do with that because this was the only game this season where we tackled so poorly."

Defense has been a problem for Triton and head coach Tom Crum finds symptoms for that in his offense.

"We just haven't been able to control the ball," Crum said, "and our defense gets tired of being on the field so much."

"We've gotten behind early in just about every game, too. That puts a lot of pressure on the defense to step the other team and when the offense doesn't produce that makes it a lot tougher."

Triton has been hampered by the loss of starting quarterback Mike Byron, who was put on the bench with an injury during the Wright game. They have been countering with Larry Turner at quarterback, Jeff Walsh (5-10, 170) at tailback and Mike Young (5-11, 215) at fullback.

"There's a chance Byron will be back for the Harper game," Crum said, "but I'm not counting on it. He and Turner are about equal in ability but Byron is the more consistent thrower."

"On one play against Illinois Valley (a 16-14 come from behind win for Triton) Turner threw one of the best passes I've ever seen a quarterback at Triton throw. But on less difficult plays he'd throw badly. He just needs to settle down."

"On the whole, though, I think Turner is better at moving the offense and that is what we need."

Crum cited intensity and offensive control as the clues Triton will need to unlock the Harper mystery.

"The team that wants the game more and comes out and holds onto the football is going to win. Harper has that veer offense and the players to make it work and if they have their hands on the ball they'll score."

Region IV runners in state meet today

Harper's cross country team competes today in the Region IV meet at Lewis University in Glen Ellyn with an outside shot at qualifying for the nationals. Today's meet is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m.

The junior college Hawks will be hard-pressed to crack into the state's top three teams, but Harper runners Rich Reithal and Bob Borucki could earn a spot in the nationals Nov. 8 at Rochester, Minn. with a top 15 individual finish. The Hawks will also be preparing for the N4C conference meet Nov. 1.

Prospect golfers trail leaders by 20 strokes

The defending state golf champs from Rockford Guilford shook off the effects of strong, gusty winds to post a 333 on the rugged Orange Course and take a one-stroke lead after the opening round of playoff action in Champaign Friday.

The local area contender, Prospect did not fare as well under the dry but less than favorable weather conditions for the state finals, carding a 353 after 18 holes to tie with Decatur MacArthur in ninth place.

The final 18-hole segment will unwind Saturday, on the easier Blue Course at the University of Illinois' Savoy layout.

Belleville West trails Guilford by one stroke in the team standings while Carmel, a runner-up to the Knights in the New Trier sectional last week, holds down third place at 333. Other squads in ahead of Prospect after the opening round are West Aurora (340), Proviso West (345), Hinsdale Central (347), Bloom (348) and Niles North (349).

Individually, favored Waukegan East at-large entry Dave Ogrin, making his fourth trip into the state finals, came in at 73 to take a commanding lead. His nearest competitor is Mike Konar of Joliet Catholic at 73.

Heading up the Prospect effort Friday were Scott Spielmann and Paul Moats, both with 65s. Pete Lund carded a 90 and Mike Ambrosio a 83 to round out scoring for coach George Bork's unit.

All four Knight golfers improved on the back nines, Spielmann posting a 40 after opening with a 45. Collectively, their breakdown was 181-172-333.

Also participating for Prospect were Mike Dee (94) and Bill Chamberlin (96).

Hersey rolls along; socks Fremd, 28-0

by ART MUGALIAN

The rain had all but stopped and Hersey coach Joe Gilwa was delivering a short, post-game synopsis of the Huskies' 28-0 victory at Fremd Friday night.

"I don't know what the official statistics will show," said Gilwa, "but Matt Zakula scored two touchdowns for us and we had two more on blocked punts."

Gilwa just wanted to give credit where it was due in a game variously termed "lots of fun" and a "real mess" by a couple of Hersey assistants. It was a sloppy game, to say the least, and on a number of occasions the identity of the ball carrier was in doubt.

"Our kids just want to get some momentum going for the state playoffs," said Gilwa, whose team, now 8-0, has already clinched the Mid-Suburban North title and a spot in the IHSA Class 5A tournament.

Husky quarterback Scott Topczewski got the offense moving on the first series with a 28-yard pass by junior halfback Wally Hommerding, putting the ball on the Fremd 40.

Zakula blasted into the line three times for a first down, then the 195-pound fullback took a screen pass from Topczewski and followed, his blocking for a 33-yard TD play. Bob Schachner's kick gave Hersey a quick 7-0 lead.

Then the Huskies' defense did its share of momentum-building. First Mark Knittel recovered a Viking fumble at the Fremd 36. Hersey couldn't capitalize on that one, but a bit later Tom Janus blocked a Pete Passaglia punt and Hersey's Brian Falt ran 30 yards with the recovery for a touchdown.

It was the first of two blocked punts the Huskies converted into scores against Fremd, now 1-1.

Fremd's defense stopped Hersey twice more in the first half, once when Dave Ragains pounced on a Husky fumble and again when Cary Youman wrapped up Zakula on a fourth-and-four from the Viking 17.

Mark Bessie broke through the line and blocked another Fremd punt at the start of the second half as Passaglia stood near his own goal line. Mark Johnson fell on the ball in the end zone for a Hersey touchdown.

Held to just 16 total yards in the first half, the Fremd offense fared little better in the second half.

Against a bevy of Hersey substitutes, the Vikings and junior quarterback Dale Hallberg managed only two first downs in the second half. Hallberg finished with three completions for 34 yards. The Fremd ground game yielded only eight yards all night.

Zakula, who gathered 57 yards rushing, caught his second touchdown pass of the game in the fourth quarter, this one an 18-yarder from sophomore QB Dan Vucovich, who was making his first varsity appearance of the year.

Hommerding added 59 yards on the ground in 12 carries for Hersey.

Fremd's deepest penetration was to the Hersey 34 on a 26-yard pass from Hallberg to Danny Whyler in the fourth period, but a moment later the Vike QB was sacked by Bobby Hart for a six-yard loss and an end to the threat.

Cards win in overtime; Knights roll, 23-6

by JIM COOK

Arlington and Buffalo Grove rattled the heart of the Cardinals' football field for four quarters Friday night in a scoreless duel, but Arlington took advantage of a rare grassy area at the 10-yard line and ended the marathon contest in the first overtime period, 13-0.

The unusual extra-period score was derived from a Steve Leonhard touchdown sprint on Arlington's initial possession in the tie-breaking session that produced a 7-0 Cardinal lead.

But the decision was cemented on Buffalo Grove's ensuing four-down attempt from the 10 when Arlington speedster defensive back Gary Kempton picked off a Dave Zimmer pass at the three and galloped 97 yards for the second Card score. The conversion attempt was not attempted since the interception terminated the Bison's final scoring bid.

"I want someone to tell me that a 6-0 game is boring," a winded, drenched and exhausted Arlington head coach Chuck Haines said.

"Boy, when we hit that grass, we really moved. The kids really wanted this one badly," he added, knowing the victory forced a second place tie in North Division standings behind undefeated Hersey.

The game started in a quagmire between the 20 yard lines and concluded in virtual quicksand with neither team capable of sustaining a serious drive.

Three field goals were attempted during regulation play, but between the pelting rain, goosy field and slippery pigskin, none of the placekicks came very close to cracking the stalemate.

Buffalo Grove's deepest penetration came during the second quarter and went down to the Arlington 10, but Steve Pilster's 27-yard three-point try was partially blocked.

Arlington faced a similar situation midway through the third period with a fourth and goal at the Bison three, but Leonhard's 20-yard field goal effort was short.

The big Cardinal halfback found running room in the overtime session, though. With Arlington first to handle the ball, Cardinal quarterback Matt Shaughnessy lateraled to Leonhard who swept the right side and followed the blocks of Art Klein and Kirk Kennedy into the end zone. He promptly added the extra point for a 7-0 Arlington edge.

In Buffalo Grove's offensive turn, runningback Ben Orcutt was stopped cold by the middle of the Arlington line and Zimmer threw incomplete before Cardinal Kempton stepped in front of the Bison receiver on third down and tallied on the electrifying 97-yard interception.

Prospect clips visiting Mustangs

by KEITH REINHARD

Neither rain, nor wind, nor cold... It was all true. Helped along by the benevolence of the opposition, Prospect mail carriers Don Meyer, Keith Mason and Tim Kubicki completed their self-appointed rounds Friday night and the Knights rolled to a soggy victory over visiting Rolling Meadows, 23-6.

Prospect had help from the enemy in ringing up three straight touchdowns to go with a field goal and breezed into a commanding lead before the Mustangs were able to sustain an errorless drive. As a result, coach Dave Keefe's hosting crew was able to brighten up a Homecoming crowd despite the dampener produced by Mother Nature.

And the decision enabled the Knights to up their overall record to 6-2, shaking off the effects of last week's setback at Schaumburg which knocked them out of the pennant race.

"We were opportunists, for sure," smiled Keefe afterwards, adding, "but at the same time, we kept our own mistakes to a minimum under pretty adverse conditions out there."

Those adverse conditions did prompt eight miscues — three of them lost — and an interception against Meadows and sandwiched in with several critical penalties, it was all Prospect needed to be victorious.

Late in the first quarter the Knights had an 80-yard scoring march launched with back-to-back, 15-yard assessments on the guests and Meyer culminated it by charging up the middle from the one early in period two.

Before the stanza ended quarterback Kubicki unloaded a pair of passes on another drive, advancing the Knights to the Mustang 12, and Terry Freeman came on to boot a 30-yard field goal just under the halftime gun.

The Knight lead grew to 17-0 in the third period after Meyer plucked off a Ken Breitbel pass and returned it 15 yards to the Meadows five. Four plays later Kubicki slid off the left side from the one to ring up the score.

Before the quarter ended the home team was back in control, compliments of a Freeman recovery of a Mustang fumble at the 26. Meyer ripped off 14 yards in one try and then capped the quick thrust early in quarter four with a sweep around the right side from 11 yards out. Rolling Meadows countered by staying strictly on the ground after Ken Barro had powered for a 54-yard kick-off return. Barro also did the brunt of the rushing on the 36-yard advance and went off right tackle from three to crack the scoring column.

Prospect came right back with a drive down inside the Mustang 10 but it was finally throttled by a penalty and as time ran out Meadows was moving quickly back toward midfield.

Palatine, Elk Grove post triumphs

by MIKE GARBUS

The spotlight last night at Palatine's Ost Field was on the Pirates' senior halfback Jim Popp who needed just 90 yards to break ex-Forest View running back Mike Pryor's season rushing record of 1,015 yards.

A determined Wheeling defensive unit held the 5-foot-8, 165-pound workhorse to 79 yards in 20 carries, but Pirate quarterback Mark McCoslin rolled up 172 in 16 carries on a muddy track to lead Palatine to a 20-0 victory.

Palatine now boasts a 6-2 overall record, 3-2 in conference, with a contest against Prospect yet remaining, while Wheeling's hopes for breaking into the win column in 1975 league competition looks dim as they face Mid-Suburban League South Division champ Schaumburg next weekend. Wheeling over-all now stands at 1-7.

The Pirates fumbled away their first possession of the game, one of two they coughed up on the night. But on the seventh play of their next series, McCoslin faked Popp into the line and circled left end for 58 yards and the first score of the game at 4:24. Bill Finlay then booted the first of his two conversions.

The hosts got that drive started after pouncing on a bobble by Wildcat quarterback Glenn Barry. The Cats had trouble hanging onto the ball in the nearly game-long driving rain as Palatine's defenders recovered three of the visitors' six fumbles.

Popp contributed a one-yard burst at 5:05 in the second period to cushion the lead before McCoslin connected with Finlay on a 38-yard scoring strike at 1:03 of the same quarter to wrap up the point production.

Finlay had sloshed his way into the clear with such ease that he had time to wait for McCoslin's underthrown aerial, then outspurt two Wheeling defenders to the endzone.

Wheeling, a squad with seven starters who have never played a minute of organized high school football before this year, saw a shaken Barry walk off the field midway through the third quarter. With his backup Steve Smalley already shelved with a broken ankle, coach Gerry Clinkin left the controls to kicker-end-defensive back Scott Jones. His only experience at the position was during a tryout prior to the season opener.

Jones finished with four completions in nine tries for 83 yards with one interception. Combined, Barry and Jones struck for a respectable 147 yards through the air under adverse conditions, but the weather, the Wildcats' own mistakes and a Pirate defense that limited its guests to 39 total yards on the ground all contributed to the shutout.

Roberts leads Grens' victory

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Tim Roberts muddled for 144 yards through the slop Friday night to lead the Elk Grove Grenadiers to a 15-6 Mid-Suburban League South Division victory over the Conant Cougars.

The game was delayed more than a half hour by a vicious storm and officials contemplated postponement out of deference to the lightning that crackled around the sparse Conant Homecoming crowd.

But once the game began and Roberts began to get his feet under him in the second half, the Grenadier senior chewed up 125 yards of muddy turf including a game-clinching 44-yard touchdown sprint around the right side.

Conant's Jeff Johnson had enough fooling in the first half to pick up 72 of his 86 yard total for the night.

Without taking any unnecessary chances the newly converted fullback, who learned all the offensive plays in one night after switching from line-backer, accepted the simple handoffs from quarterback Scott Schafer and plowed straight ahead in the Conant's ground control offense.

The ball possession strategy was so successful in the first half that Elk Grove ran just seven offensive plays to Conant's 38, allowing the Cougars to lead a ballgame for the first time this season.

That lead came right at the end of the first half when Schafer crossed up the Elk Grove defense by rolling to his left and hitting Mike Frisch all by himself in the end zone for a five yard touchdown. The try for the two-point conversion missed.

The first half of play was free of errors but both teams came out in the second half and lost the ball on successive plays. Conant coughed up the ball to Pete Gennuso but Cougars Ron Burhite and Dennis Brooks retrieved it on the next play when they pounded on a loose Elk Grove ball.

Conant punted after four plays and David King, returning the kick for the Grens, needed just one block downfield to spring for a touchdown but didn't get it and had to settle for a 40-yard gain.

The runback put Elk Grove at Conant's 27-yard line and eight plays later the Grens took the lead back for good when Roberts slashed over from the three-yard line.

Dave Champa lined up to kick the extra point but faked out the Conant defense by taking the snap and scooting around the right side for the two points.

Conant started their next drive from their own 45-yard line and moved to the Elk Grove 31 on the strength of an eight yard run by Johnson and a 13 yard break by Steve Stompanato.

Schafer was forced to the air at the end, though, and his pass to Frisch was knocked away by Jim Raetzman to end the threat.

Elk Grove took over at the 31 and Roberts broke off runs of three, seven and four yards, before finding the opening he needed around the right side for his 44-yard touchdown.

Conant's last gasp was highlighted by a 16-yard run by Schafer in which Gennuso broke through a wall of blockers to cut off the Cougar quarterback at the Elk Grove 47-yard line.

Bulls lose opener

Doug Collins and rookie Lloyd Free sparked a second half rally to give the Philadelphia 76ers a 110-103 victory over the Chicago Bulls Friday night in the opener of the National Basketball Association season for both clubs in the Stadium.

Collins scored 12 of his 38 points in the second half and Free scored eight of his 10 to pull the 76ers ahead late in the third period.

Chicago held a 55-49 lead at the half but Philadelphia battled back and took the lead for good on a fastbreak by Steve Mix that put the 76ers ahead 76-75. Free and Collins scored the next eight points and Philadelphia took the edge after three periods, 83-81.

Chicago's only answer was Norm Van Lier who scored 18 of his game-high 28 points in the second half. He was helped by reserve forward Roland Garrett who had 12 in the second half.

Philadelphia's highly-publicized mid-summer acquisition, George McGinnis, who was last year's high scorer in the American Basketball Association, had 14 points.

WFL players untouchable

Commissioner Pete Rozelle ordered NFL teams Friday to keep hands off players who are looking for a job as a result of the World Football League's collapse. Acting under the threat of an anti-trust suit from WFL Memphis owner John Bassett, Rozelle said it was too far into the NFL season to develop an "orderly" plan for signing the former WFL players.

Coach Don Shula said he thought the ruling by Rozelle "was predominantly a ruling on the Miami Dolphins." Three Dolphin stars, fullback Larry Csonka, wide receiver Paul Warfield and running back Jim Kwik, played out their options with Shula's Dolphins last season and jumped this year to the Memphis Southern of the WFL.

"I guess we'll have to see what happens when the lawyers for Csonka, Kwik and Warfield and the WFL get together," said Shula when asked whether Miami would now attempt to sign the trio for next season.

'Golden Games' for U.S. team

The United States team swept all four finals Friday to conclude the swimming competition at the Pan American Games, while the tennis and wrestling teams also came up with pots of gold medals. With one full day of competition remaining, devoted to the boxing and team finals, the U.S. has 109 gold medals to surpass the 89 won at Cali, Columbia, in 1971 where the competition was less fierce.

The swimmers ended with 27 of 29 titles, Kim Peyton of Portland, Ore., winning her fourth gold medal of the Games in the 100 meters freestyle.

'Cinderellas' share Disney lead

The Cinderella rookie team of Jimmy Wittenberg and Bryan Abbott worked their magic again at Wald Disney World Friday to post a 64 and hold onto a share of the lead halfway through the $200,000 National Team Championship at Lake Buena Vista, Fla. The two unknowns from the Deep South, working in intermittent drizzles, poole their talents to put them at 126, 18 under par, after 36 holes.

NOTRE DAME HEAD coach Dan Devine takes his football team through a final workout Friday before the big meeting on national television with Southern California. Rumors this week have had former Coach Ara Parseghian taking over Devine's job for the season with Miami's Don Shula becoming the Irish head man next fall.

Hull protests hockey brutality

Bobby Hull went on strike Friday to protest what he called the "brutality" in the World Hockey Association. "This action, it is hoped by Bobby, will result in some immediate response from the league," said Rudy Pilous, general manager of the Winnipeg Jets, Hull's team.

Battery charges against Chicago Cubs' outfielder Jose Cardenal and his wife, Patricia, were dropped Friday, but Patricia was found guilty of resisting arrest. The incident occurred July 3 at O'Hare Airport when Patrolman Dennis Dickson asked Mrs. Cardenal to move her car from a restricted parking area at the airport.

Darrell Johnson, the quiet, "Great Stone Face" of the Boston Red Sox, is the UPI's American League manager of the year.

Golfer seeks fastest round mark

Fred Tattersall of Columbia, who is trying to set a world record for the fastest round of golf, played 18 holes in 35 minutes Friday at Myrtle Beach, S.C. Tattersall fired an 83 despite being hampered by rain. The current world record is just over 30 minutes.

Tattersall is in training for an all-out attempt on the record next month at Hilton Head Island. At Hilton Head, he plans to have assistants running with him to spot the ball. There will be a person at each tee to set up the ball for him.

Title, 90th straight match to Evert

Chris Evert demolished Evonne Goolagong Cawley, 6-1, 6-1, Friday to take the women's singles championship of the World Invitational Tennis Classic, her 90th straight match and her 18th straight tournament win on a clay court at Hilton Head Island, S.C.

"I am trying to play more aggressively," Evert said after the 54-minute match. "I am making myself come to the net, I'm learning to volley and I'm trying to make my opponents make the mistakes."

Unger's offensive work sparks West; Falcons handle Waukegan East

by J. ANDREW KEHE

by LARRY MONROE

On a night like last night you can bet that most of the action will "be in the trenches," the middle of the line with each team going to their principal ball carrier time after time.

Scott Unger did it all for Maine West as he carried the ball 27 times for 114 yards Friday in leading the Warriors to a lopsided 27-0 win over Niles East at a very soggy Maine West stadium.

On the very first set of downs the Trojans of Niles may have made a very costly mistake when they chose not to punt with fourth and six at the Maine 36. After an unsuccessful pass on fourth down the Warriors took over and marched through the mud 64 yards in 16 plays with Unger being involved in 12 of those plays. Unger drove over from the two and the Warriors held a 7-0 lead after Izral's kick.

The Warriors had the only good scoring opportunity in the second period as senior linebacker Bob Smith broke through to block a Trojan punt and Pat Hartley pounced on the ball at the Niles 23. The Trojans dug in and held and the two teams played to a stalemate for the remainder of the half.

Niles East and running back Pete Christopoulos came out smoking in the second half and drove down to the Warrior 36 but stalled there as quarterback Chris Klancic missed on two crucial passes. Unger contributed more heroics when he ended the third quarter by taking a pitchout and rambling 37 yards for a score. The Warriors lead 14-0 entering the final period.

The Trojans found their passing game nonexistent and their running game just mediocre and fumbled their hopes away in the fourth quarter as they gave up the football twice. Both led to Warrior touchdowns.

Warrior quarterback Bob Zuccarni fired a 14-yard T.D. pass to Rob Earhart on fourth and goal to make it 20-0 Maine West. The Warriors then cashed in on a bad snap from center on a Trojan punt deep in Maine West territory. Niles Punter Yale Smith could only fall on the ball at the five yard line and Zuccarni then rolled in from four yards out.

Under conditions hardly suited for football or any other outdoor activity, the Falcons of Forest View overwhelmed the visiting Bulldogs of Waukegan East 16-0.

Though the affair could not really be considered a true test of either team's ability, the Falcons were much more dominant than the score may indicate. Waukegan mounted only one threat throughout the evening, and failed to cross the midfield stripe for the entire second half.

For a while before last night's contest it was even doubtful that the game would take place at all. There was a 50 minute delay before the game as the teams waited for the threatening lightning to subside. Finally the game did get under way on a football field that more closely resembled a pond.

The first five minutes of the game hinted that neither team would get past the opponents' 40 yard line. But the hosts finally got a drive started from their own 48-yard line, and used a series of dives up the middle before senior fullback Steve Coskey penetrated the Bulldog goal line from the two. Quarterback Jim Petran went around left end for the two point conversion, and the Falcons led 6-0.

Neither team was able to mark a score for the second quarter, although Waukegan did drive down to the Falcon 10, only to be stopped in what proved to be their only hint of scoring for the night.

Field position obviously played a major role in this affair, and the hosts could never get out of the hole that the Bulldog offense had put them in.

Opening the second half, however, the Falcons came out flying, and penetrated the visitor's 20 on three separate occasions before they finally capitalized as Coskey again took it over from the two with only :13 remaining in the third quarter.

Senior standout Petran again took it over for the conversion and the 16-0 score which proved to be the final.

The domination in this game was clearly showed in the final statistics. The Falcons gained a total of 240 yards, all by the rush, while the visitors accumulated only 41 yards total.

The Great Ski Swap

by JIM COOK
Outdoor Editor

The scene resembles the floor of the Board of Trade Building.

First-time salespeople stand before their sentimental goods, dickering, bickering and snickering with anxious customers looking to find that bargain buy.

The fast and furious action can be found in the grandstand area of Arlington Park Racetrack where Ski Show/expowinter '75 continues the second half of its four-day run today from 1-11 p.m. and Sunday from 1-7 p.m.

Billed as the Great Ski Swap, prospective buyers and sellers of ski clothing, equipment and accessories gather and barter for boots, bindings and blood.

"How low will you go on these skis?" a beginner on the slopes wanted to know after studying a price tag for several minutes and hoping it would change.

"I'm asking $30 firm," came the answer from the attractive teenage female owner. "They've only been used six times, but I've outgrown them."

"That's a little too steep for me," the beginner surrendered.

"Wait a minute," the inexperienced salesgirl beckoned. "I really need the money for some new skis, and if I don't sell these by Saturday night, come back Sunday and maybe we can work something out."

The wheeling and dealing is governed by only one major law. There is no credit. As every young entrepreneur knows, it's cash on the barrel-head, or at least something of equivalent value.

Anyone wanting to sell used gear brought it prior to the show's opening Thursday and checked it into the "Swap" area. They were required to pay a token fee to show their merchandise and a service charge for each item sold.

In the image of a gigantic garage sale, most goods are reasonably priced and offer the slim-budgeted skier an opportunity to purchase used gear for less than the proverbial arm and a leg.

Ski sweaters, jackets and slacks line the aisles in the stiff posture of wire hangers. Helmets, gloves, bindings and boots are scattered on the floor for easy fitting by the shoeless buyers.

But most of the attention is centered around the regiment of skis and poles that stand at rigid attention for constant inspection.

The manufacturer's name is the most important single selling point in the ski market. The length of the ski, its width, material, construction and, of course, condition all figure prominently in the ultimate purchase.

There is still plenty of time to visit the Great Ski Swap at Arlington Park Racetrack and work out a transaction. Admission is $3.50 for adults and $2 for children 12 and under.

Wanted: A cold breath of Canadian air

Quiet opener for state's duck hunters

Anxious duck hunters witnessed a "fair" opener Wednesday afternoon although shooting did pick up the first morning of the Illinois waterfowl season on Thursday.

"Reports were better than expected," Illinois Department of Conservation spokesman Marc Tuttle said. "The big factor was the weather. It's more suited for bluebirds than ducks."

With temperatures climbing into the 70s on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, a stiff southerly wind and blue skies kept most of the ducks in the water.

But climate conditions are expected to change dramatically over the weekend with a cold breath of Canadian air and a strong chance of rain creating perfect "duck-soup" weather.

Things were relatively quiet during the first three days of the season with mostly small, local birds acting as targets.

With the big flights still up north, area hunters have been squeezing the trigger on wood ducks, teal, a few concentrations of mallards and occasionally a goose.

"There's a ton of geese up north," Tuttle said. "As usual, Hrocin Marsh in Wisconsin is crowded, but they'll stay up there until it freezes, is snowed under or the birds run out of feed."

"Duckological," the organ of Ducks Unlimited in Canada, admits September and the early part of October have been wet and warm and with an abundant food supply, even the early migrants are reluctant to leave.

Blue-winged teal and pintail have begun their march south with good numbers reported across the prairies and even as far south as Louisiana already.

Outdoors

Jim Cook
Outdoor Editor
394-2300

Canada geese and whitefronts arrived into Canada from the north about on schedule and, though many whitefronts have now moved on, Canada geese are present in excellent numbers all across the prairies.

Snow geese have been slow to appear in both Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Neither province has as many of these birds as last year at this time. A little colder weather in the north is all that is needed.

In summary, as the birds begin to flock prior to migration, it is obvious that an excellent production year is in store. Good numbers of geese have been reported from the Arctic region.

Heavy rains have filled the prairie ponds for next year's production and there appears to be ample water to get the 1976 duck crop away to a roaring start.

Hunger fight-from charity to justice

The religious community of the United States has been "thrown a gauntlet."

For the past year, as the nature of the world food crisis and the extent of domestic hunger became increasingly known and publicized, denomination after denomination, across the religious spectrum of Catholic, Orthodox, Protestant and Jew, adopted resolutions on the subject.

Each resolution recognized that old methods of dealing with the food problem were not sufficient and that it was necessary, as the Roman Catholic bishops declared nearly a year ago, to move from charity to justice in the churches' view of old and development.

Behind each resolution, then, there also was an unspoken question: What can the person in the pew, the grassroots believer, do to affect policy, to aid the shift from charity to justice?

BREAD FOR THE WORLD, headed by the Rev. Eugene Carson Blake, former general secretary of the World Council of Churches; and Bishop Thomas Gumbleton, auxiliary bishop of the Roman Catholic diocese of Detroit, have come up with a first step in a campaign to involve citizens across the nation in the effort to help shape policy.

The plan involves a nation-wide "offering of letters" in the churches this November to be directed at members of Congress in order to demonstrate broad public support for a "right-to-food" resolution introduced in Congress by Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., and Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn.

by David E. Anderson

Churches throughout the country will be asked to have members write personal letters to their representatives in Congress in support of the resolution and then place the letters in a special collection basket on one of the last three Sundays in November.

"We want enough letters to descend on Congress to show unmistakably what the will of the church is, and what we think the will of the nation should be, concerning God's hungry people," Blake said.

THE RESOLUTION is, of course, only a first step.

It declares that the right of every person to a nutritionally adequate diet "should become a fundamental part of reference in the formation of legislative and administrative decisions in areas such as trade, assistance, monetary reform, military spending and all other matters that bear on hunger."

Domestically, the resolution calls for full employment and a floor of "economic decency" for every U.S. citizen.

In development assistance, the resolution urges that the United States make every effort to bring its aid up to 1 per cent of the Gross National Product.

"The country has a greatly exaggerated idea of this country's assistance," Gumbleton said. He noted that of 17 donor countries, the United States ranked 14th last year when development aid was measured as a percentage of GNP. Last year the U.S. gave one-fifth of 1 per cent and that percentage has been steadily shrinking over the past several years.

THE PROBLEM with a sense-of-Congress resolution is that it has no legal binding power.

But Blake said the resolution "could mark a turning point for the nation" because it does cut new ground in the perception of the hunger problem and it lays the foundation for a long-range effort.

It at least provides a point of reference for citizens to express their concern and make their voice heard on Capitol Hill.

The challenge has been given and the response now is up to the grassroots. To the question "what can I do?" Bread for the World has given the first part of the answer. Now the churches can show whether or not they are really serious about the world food problem.

Keeping cue with 'Donahue'

by TONI GINETTI
First of a Series

Ron Weiner is in a near frenzy. His cameramen aren't getting the close-up shots he wants and the air-time moments are slipping by.

"We're blowing this," he yells to them through a communications headset. "We've got to see him, Adolph! I hated both those shots."

"Why the hell are you so jerky," he hollers jumping from his chair. "No, I can't give you time to do anything. That's the show!"

Below Weiner's glass-enclosed electronics room, nearly 200 women enjoy an entertaining give-and-take between talk show host Phil Donahue and his guest. None of them has the slightest notion that the bearded, balding television director above is boiling in a pressure cooker.

An hour later, the studio is empty and Weiner comes by, looking about as frazzled as a guy who just went for a Sunday stroll. You look at him unbelievably.

Doesn't he feel drained after an hour of nonstop panic?

"Oh, no," he says matter-of-factly. "I feel fine."

For Weiner and a dozen others whose talents combine to create "Donahue," the 11 a.m. weekday hour in WGN-TV's Studio 2 is hectic, but it's not a grind.

With eight years of experience, this crew knows they are good.

"We've made most of the mistakes," Donahue says. "So we're pretty good at knowing what will fly."

"But people say 'oh, you do live TV. What if...?' But the 'if' never happens. A live show is not a terrible loaded gun."

Donahue's Emmy award-winning program moved from Dayton, Ohio where it started as a local show to Chicago in April 1974. The show and its production staff are owned by Avco Broadcasting Corp. which leases equipment, studio space and technicians, including director Weiner, from WGN.

Although the program is taped for syndication to 58 cities throughout the U.S. and the Virgin Islands, the home audience in Chicago is treated to the spontaneity, indeed the rarity, of "at-the-moment" viewing. There is no time for mistakes when the cameras are rolling live.

Irv Kupcinet

Lee Phillip

They talk a lot but also listen. They probe, push and cajole until they get the answer you want to hear.

They are the TV talkers, hosts of Chicago's three locally produced talk shows. Phil Donahue, Irv Kupcinet and Lee Phillip — three "entertainers" who deal in the art of conversation and people who make the news.

Starting today and running the next two Saturdays, Leisure will focus on each of these celebrities — how they got where they are today and the roles they play in the world of gab.

Matched against a barrage of morning game shows and soap operas, the "Donahue" show has enjoyed a steady diet of success. This is due in no small part to the personable, unassuming 39-year-old reporter-turned-interviewer whose inviting personality and naturalness regularly captures his audience.

But the show's other ace, the staff will tell you, is its format — a 60-minute conversation among Donahue, his guest and the audience.

"I think the show is done in what I like to call a town-hall-meeting format," executive producer Dick Mincer says. "We don't feel we're in competition necessarily with them (other talk shows) because we're different."

"We watch all of them and I'd like to think that they watch us. But because we're different — we feature one guest for 60 minutes — I think that sets us apart."

Says Donahue, "We knew a long time ago we had to avoid 'two talking heads.' That's why the audience is so important."

Like a good host Donahue takes care to see that his predominantly female audiences feel at home on his show, down to a detail like providing coffee for them as they enter.

"It's a bit like entertaining in your home," he says. "You want to make sure that everything is right and that people are having a good time. We're super sensitive to that because we're aware that our audience is part of the show."

If ticket requests are an indicator of success, the show is riding a high tide. There is a six-month backlog for tickets which may not be close to the phenomenal eight-year ticket delay for WGN's "Bozo's Circus" but speaks well of the show in television circles.

Chicagoland Ghost Tour

—an eerie five hours of legend, phantoms and fear

by WANDALYN RICE

The woman in the blue plastic rainhat nervously edged around the group gathered at the religious statue. Finally, ignoring those who were searching some water stains on the wall for mysterious faces, she rushed up to Richard Crowe.

"Back there by the confessional, I had a definite feeling that a young boy was being murdered," she said. "A boy about 16 or 17, down below us in the basement."

"There has been at least one murder in the basement. There's a youth center down there and about two weeks ago, a kid, about 17, was shot there," Crowe replied.

The scene was Holy Family Church on Chicago's South Side. On this day, the woman's "feeling" would be the only slightly supernatural event, but it was enough to give the Chicago Ghost Tour, led by Richard Crowe, the impression of authenticity.

Father Arnold Damen (for whom Damen Avenue was named) was getting ready for bed one stormy night in the early 1880's when two altar boys carrying tall, lighted candles appeared at his door. The lights from the boys' candles didn't flicker in the wind and rain. Father Damen followed the boys to the far end of the parish where he found a dying woman to whom he gave the last rites.

The woman, before she died, asked the priest how he had found her. After he described the boys, she said, "Father, those are my sons. They have been dead for many years."

Father Damen reported the incident to Rome where it was duly recorded. In addition, he commissioned two statues for the church. The two wooden carvings still stand on either side of the altar at Holy Family.

The parish's living altar boys claim the statues' eyes follow them as they take part in the Mass.

Halloween is the time of year for ghosts, so it is the time when Richard Crowe, a heavysset, 27-year-old employee of the Chicago Planning Dept., attracts the most attention with his stories about altar boys and other hauntings.

But for Crowe, ghosts, unidentified flying objects and other eerie manifestations are a year-round preoccupation. The Chicago Ghost Tour, now nearing its second birthday, is the way he shares that preoccupation with others.

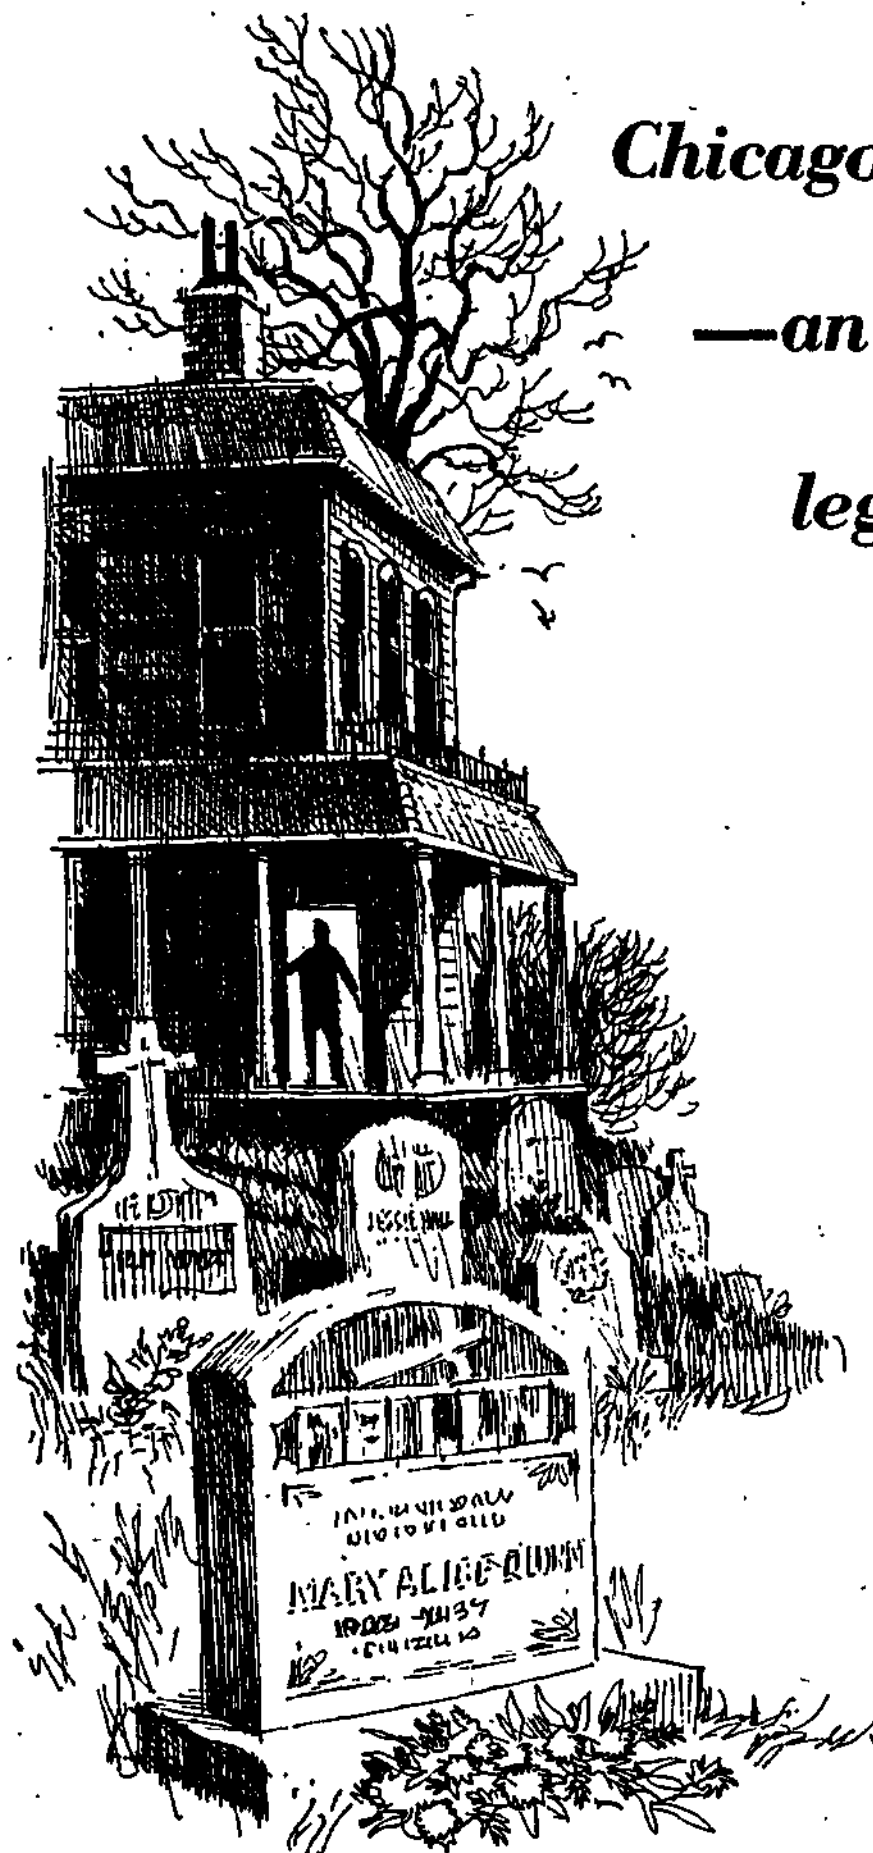

The five-hour tours are conducted Saturdays and Sundays throughout the year, with interest peaking between Halloween and Christmas. As the tour bus pulls out of the DePaul University parking lot and Crowe asks "that you keep an open mind," the tour-goers on this particular fall Sunday tell jokes to show they don't take this too seriously.

In 1963, on a winter night while a light snow was falling, five teen-age boys from Harper High School, Chicago, were walking along Marquette Road toward Ashland Avenue. Coming toward them was a tall man who seemed to be surrounded by an eerie green glow.

At first the boys, thinking the lights from a nearby service station were reflecting on the snow and playing tricks on them, continued walking toward the man. When they were about 20 feet away from him, however, they suddenly realized he was transparent — an apparition similar to glowing green ghosts who appear in Britain.

The boys turned and ran.

The tall, distinguished looking woman with owl-like glasses is busy telling every-

Search goes on for UFO's, werewolves

RICHARD CROWE

When Richard Crowe is not telling ghost stories, he spends much of his time checking out UFO's, looking for hairy monsters or investigating reports of werewolves.

In his role as head of the Chicago Fortean Society he exchanges strange stories and tales with fellow "Forteans." He is planning a trip to Ireland in the spring to look for ghosts and often visits other parts of the U.S. checking out strange events.

"I was in Missouri when they were looking for the 'Missouri Monster' a couple of years ago," Crowe says. "I was one of the first outsiders to get there after the first reports and I was in a forest with it. I could smell it and the dogs were going crazy — there was definitely something there."

Crowe explains that Forteans take their name from Charles Fort, the man who first began discussing UFO's about the turn of the century. Forteans are interested in all unexplained phenomena and publish national newsletters and magazines on various subjects.

"I think all these things — UFO's,

"Big Foot" type monsters, ghosts — all have some kind of connection," Crowe says. "I just can't buy the extraterrestrial theory to explain UFO's. I think there are a lot of things on earth that aren't explained."

In addition to the local ghost stories, he also has a wealth of knowledge about other aspects of local history. "I've always been interested in local history but ghosts seem to be the thing that interests everyone," he says.

Crowe's tour is one of the few ways a Chicagoan can see historic Holy Family Church at Roosevelt Road and May Street in the neighborhood partly destroyed by construction of the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle campus. The church, which survived the Chicago Fire and once had more than 1,500 families in its parish, now is down to just 100 families.

The church is kept locked except for a few masses each week and the ghost tours, Crowe explains. Each tour group receives a brief, low-key urging from Crowe to contribute to the church's up-keep.

While Crowe originally thought of the ghost tour as an occasional thing, it has grown rapidly, with increasing numbers of groups requesting private tours.

"I've had everything from Parents Without Partners to Bankers Life and Casualty Co. on private tours," he says. "One time I even had a motorcycle club. That was the toughest looking group I ever saw."

Eventually, Crowe says, the ghost tours almost will become fulltime. "If that would give me the freedom to do research, that would be great," he says.

And research is likely to take Richard Crowe to all sorts of places. Earlier this month, he did not schedule any ghost tours so he could go to New Mexico to check out reports of Navajo werewolves.

"I got some great tape recordings from witnesses," Crowe said when he returned. "There are invisible werewolves in a public health clinic in Gallup, New Mexico. The people there can hear them growling and howling at night."

one about her experience on a ghost tour in London. "They have sooo many ghosts there, why you can just hardly imagine," she said. "I never would have dreamed Chicago would have ghosts. It's just too new a city if you understand what I mean."

The bus swings out into the Sunday afternoon traffic on Lake Shore Drive, as Crowe begins the story of the "Rouse Simmons," the ship which carried Christmas trees to Chicago until it vanished without a trace in a storm during the winter of 1912.

"Lake Michigan holds many secrets, and it holds them well," he said. "Four years ago, scores of witnesses saw a World War I vintage biplane suddenly appear and crash into the lake off Lake Point Tower. When the rescue crew got to the spot, there was nothing — not even an oil slick. The plane had appeared briefly and vanished."

By the time the bus turns onto Archer Avenue, after pulling away from Holy Family's decaying neighborhood, talk of London has died down. Tour-goers want to hear more of Crowe's ghost stories.

Resurrection Mary is a blonde Polish girl wearing a white dancing dress who has been hitchhiking on Archer Avenue since the 1930's. When she is picked up by a young man she asks to be taken dancing, but invariably vanishes when the car passes the cemetery at 79th and Archer where she is supposedly buried.

In recent years, instead of hitchhiking, Mary has started jumping into cars uninvited and asking incoherently to be taken into Chicago. She was last seen on the Saturday before Christmas 1974, waltzing down Archer between Harlem Avenue and Newcastle Street.

"Most ghosts are either women, or ethnic or religious," Crowe said. "Resurrection Mary is both a woman and ethnic, so she fits. The story is that she used to go dancing and would hitchhike to dance halls on the South Side until she was killed in an auto accident. Recently, though, she's been getting more and more incoherent and I have a theory that means she's losing her power."

Hitchhiking ghosts are fairly common, he said. There have been reports of three other Chicago-area hitchhikers — a young woman dressed like a 1920's flapper, a Mexican girl in a blood-stained dress who climbs into taxicabs and vanishes and a tall bearded man who has been seen standing at the corner of Palatine and Elia roads in Palatine township.

"I haven't had a chance to check out the Palatine and Elia ghost yet," Crowe said. "A guy called me and said he had seen this hitchhiker four times. Every time he stopped to pick him up, the guy would vanish. Resurrection Mary only rides with young men. Maybe this guy is waiting for a girl to stop."

All Soul's Day, Nov. 2, 1960, St. Rita's Catholic Church, 6243 S. Fairfield, Chicago, was occupied by 11 people when suddenly the organ began to play.

As the parishioners looked up from their devotions, they saw six monk-like apparitions, three in white and three in black, hovering around the balcony.

The group ran to the door, only to find it locked. The six figures floated down the aisle toward the altar and a ghostly voice said, "Pray for me." Despite efforts to keep the event secret, stories of the occurrence circulated through nearby Catholic schools within days.

The ghost tour has stopped going inside St. Rita's to see the organ and get the feel of the place because, Crowe said, "The pastor is very ticked off and says I fabricated the whole story. The fact is I have interviewed seven witnesses who were there when it happened."

Most of Crowe's ghost stories center on Chicago's South Side because, he explained, "I'm a South Sider and I grew up hearing these stories." Some, like the St. Rita's story, he personally has documented. Others, including the story of (Continued on Page 7)

Tour visits haunts of Chicago's haunters

Resurrection Mary, have proved more elusive.

"No one seems to know Mary's last name," he said. "The people who have picked her up remember every other detail, but not that. The guys who pick up Mary are usually great, down-to-earth blue collar types with no interest in the occult. They take these things at face value."

Crowe ran his first ghost tour in 1973 as a one-time event for DePaul University. The response — "we turned away 200 people" — insured the tours would be repeated.

Crowe is now planning Ghost Tour II, a tour which will visit haunted places on the North and Northwest sections of Chicago and the suburbs. The second ghost tour will start in January and will correct the South-side bias of the original tour.

"There are some good stories for the Northside tour," he said. "There is a vanishing cemetery that appears at the end of the road somewhere on the North-side and in Hillside there's the cemetery where the kids who died in the Our Lady of Angels fire are buried. People have heard them crying and screaming at night."

Mary Alice Quinn, who died in 1934, was a sickly Irish-American girl whose favorite saint was St. Theresa, who is known to appear to the sick and comfort them. Before she died, Mary Alice told her parents she wanted to be like St. Theresa.

Ghost hunters can book tours

Prospective ghost hunters may make reservations for a regular weekend edition of the Chicago Ghost tour or set up special private tours with Richard Crowe.

Information is available from Crowe, P.O. Box 29054, Chicago 60629. The regular tours are conducted Saturday or Sunday afternoons scheduled through December. Crowe supplies those interested with alternative dates.

Private nighttime tours may be arranged for groups of 30 or more. Fee for the regular tour is $8 per person.

Shortly after Mary Alice's death, mysterious things began to happen. Those who attended the funeral said a "veil of grace" appeared over the child's face. One year after her death, Mary Alice appeared to her sister in a dream, surrounded by a glowing light.

Mary Alice's grave, in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, became the focal point for devotion to the child, with visitors taking bits of soil from the grave site. Frequently, even on the coldest winter days, an odor of roses surrounds the grave. Those who have taken soil from the grave have sometimes awakened in the middle of the night to the smell of flowers.

By the time the ghost tour stops at Mary Alice's grave, the doubting tour-goers are convinced enough to pick up some soil. "If I wake up smelling flowers, I'll die," one girl said to her mother as she tucked the artifact away.

"If you know anyone who is sick, you might give them the soil," Crowe said. "If anything happens, let me know because I'm in touch with Mary Alice's relatives and they want to keep a record."

During a pause in the tour, Crowe talks about some of the things that have happened on previous tours. "On the first ghost tour, 17 people smelled flowers at Mary Alice's grave," he said. Once, on a private nighttime tour for employees of Banker's Life and Casualty Co., Crowe and members of the tour saw a "ghost light" hovering over the other cemetery on the tour route, Bachelor's Grove in Bremen Township.

Bachelor's Grove, Crowe says, "is probably the most haunted spot in the Chicago area." Hair-raising stories about a mysterious one-armed sniper, vanishing lights and a "ghost house" are among the tales repeated about the area.

As members of the tour hike down the gravel road toward Bachelor's Grove, Crowe tells the stories. "I have had psychics on the tour who tell me there is a body buried to the left of this road — a murder victim," he said, pointing in one direction.

Could it be? A member of Crowe's ghost tour took this photo while visiting Bachelor's Grove in August 1974. Crowe claims no foggy area was visible at the time the shot was taken and that later tests proved nothing was defective with the camera or film.

"About three months ago, somebody found a voodoo doll out here," said Crowe. "Some witches' cults frequent the area. In fact, some of the humans who come here are stranger than the ghosts."

There's Life in the old magazine yet

HOLLYWOOD — Life isn't dead yet.

Life Magazine 1936-72 has published, through Time Inc., a spellbinding photographic cavalcade of Hollywood, its stars and movies, which is destined to repose on hundreds of thousands of America's living room coffee tables.

Among the outstanding journalistic photographers represented are Philippe Halman, Peter Stackpole, Bob Landry, John Florea, Don Ornitz and perhaps the most distinguished of them all, Alfred Eisenstaedt.

The 304-page picture book titled "Life Goes to The Movies" — with minimum text — is a procession of all the stars worthy of the title, plus starlets, heavies, wierdos and the rest of the Hollywood cast from D.W. Griffith to Raquel Welch.

All of the 772 photographs appeared in Life during its 36-year lifespan.

David E. Scherman, who began at Life as a glorified office boy and who served as a senior editor at its demise, produced the spectacular tome.

"I am the only person who worked for Life from the time of its inception until it ceased publication," he said.

Scherman personifies the quintessence of what Life represented at its peak. He is an aggressive native New Yorker, cocksure and imbued with the journalistic elitism that marked most Life staffers.

He and the revered Eisenstaedt, not unlike a pair of Life pallbearers, came west recently to hustle the book in Hollywood where it has found a warm reception.

"This is not a conscientious history of the movies," said Scherman. "I guess it's really about a love affair between the movies and a magazine. How one important culture medium covered another culture medium.

"The book was my idea, and I devoted six months to producing it. I pored over every page in all 1,864 copies of Life, amounting to about half a million photographs.

"Hollywood was a favorite Life subject. I had to put aside at least as many great pictures as I chose for the book."

"Life Goes to The Movies" is costly — $19.95. But there was an advance printing of 100,000 copies with 200,000 more in the works.

"Our first such book, 'The Best of Life,'" Scherman said, "cost the same amount and sold more than a million copies."

Of Life's 1,864 editions, movie people appeared on 250 covers. Leading the parade was Elizabeth Taylor with 11.

"The most controversial cover," said Eisenstaedt, "was one I took of Sophia Loren. The magazine received 2,000 letters of objection and a thousand cancellations."

Inside the covers Taylor's likeness appears no fewer than 37 times, followed by Spencer Tracy with 28 pictures.

Scherman thinks the most famous photograph in the book is one of Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney taken in 1963 when Judy was reviving her career in a musical television series.

The haunting, world-weary visages of the two former child stars will forever remain an indictment of exploitation of children in show biz.

Scherman himself spent 11 of his years with Life as a photographer although he never reached the eminence of an Eisenstaedt. He is able, however, to distinguish the qualities that separate a great photographer from a journeyman.

"It's a sense of timing," he said. "Alfred knows when to click the shutter."

There is only a millisecond when the perfect photograph is taken. He instinctively recognizes that isolated moment. He also has a built-in light meter, an innate sense of exposure. And to use a Jewish expression, he has plenty of chutzpah."

The ancient Eisenstaedt demurred. "That's not quite right. My picture editor told me I was a king in my profession and should hold no man in awe."

"If I am good it is because I always try to understand my subject, the human being whose picture I am taking. That is the real trick."

Tricks or no, "Life Goes to The Movies" is a treasure of American movie lore unlike any other.

Backstage chaos makes Donahue an ace

"One of the reasons we have lasted is because we are different," Donahue says.

"I watch the game shows, and I think the soaps are some of the most well-written things on television — but there's nothing else."

"It's different every day," Mincer says of the show. "Even though they're similar, the content of each show is different. You could have George Wallace on one day and Bella Abzug on the next."

"We don't have to have a 'Hollywood Squares' celebrity in here to make our show work. I think it's fun for all of us. It's a fun show."

Donahue's workday starts about 9 a.m. He meets with his production staff to discuss guests for upcoming shows and do some last minute preparation for the day's program.

On this day a television in the office is tuned to WLS-TV's "A.M. Chicago" morning news-talk show and Donahue eyes with interest one of the guests.

"He's good," he tells producer Pat McMillen as he finishes combing his hair and readying for airtime in 40 minutes. "See if we can get him."

Normally about 15 minutes before show-time, Donahue meets with his guest for the day. The meeting is short, Mincer says, because Donahue feels his conversation with the guest should be saved for the show to ensure a fresh, nonrepetitive on-the-air discussion.

At 10:55 a.m. Donahue breezes into his studio, smiling and kibitzing with the waiting audience who greet him with a round of applause.

Today these ladies will be treated to a double dose of celebrities. Dick Cavett, national television talk show host, is on tour promoting his new autobiography and will guest this day on "Donahue."

Donahue and Cavett are friends and the conversation is freewheeling and entertaining. Donahue brings up the matter of a lack of good, local programming on television. Cavett agrees.

The questions from the audience are directed to both men, even though Donahue plays the good host and lets the show develop between audience and guest. Off camera, commercial times mean a chance for one woman to get her picture taken with Cavett, courtesy of "photographer" Donahue.

There is time, too, for jesting as Donahue quips with "the back-rowers" during breaks. "I'm sorry you can't see the commercials," he says to a chorus of laughs. "Right now we're selling a cross-your-heart bra."

"Gee, I hate to tell you this," he adds, "it's too bad you all won't be here tomorrow because we start serving beer."

When the hour concludes, Cavett lingers for some last questions then exits via a rear door. But Donahue, as he does after each show, says goodbye with a "thank you" and a smile much like that of a favorite uncle with whom you've just spent the best day of the summer.

"You've been a great audience," he says. "Now you'll go right out that back door there. You're going to go straight home. Don't talk to any strange men on the way," he says to their giggles.

Then he whips off his suitcoat, tosses it to a waiting stagehand as he walks to the door to shake hands with each of the audience as they file out.

A half-hour later, Donahue sits back in a small, quiet WGN office room, sleeves

Phone calls from home viewers are an integral part of the Donahue format.

'Everyone should have a talk show'

rolled up, sipping a can of fruit juice, tugging at his perspiration-soaked shirt and reflecting on eight years of television success.

"I'm convinced that somebody is going to do on the networks what we are doing. What are they afraid of? TV studios are dark. They're like churches. They should be used more. Hollywood doesn't have a monopoly on good ideas."

He rubs his hands through his thick, grey hair when you ask what the problems are of a live television show.

"I guess 'what are you going to do next?' It's extremely competitive and it's awfully difficult to do things to attract people to the market. And if nobody's watching, you're not going to last."

And the advantages?

"You can't take phone calls if you're not live, so we have that advantage. You're also forced to do only one show a day. That means I've got to be there on time. If we taped, I might start to cheat a little, coming in a little later."

It would be a more plastic show. And how would you book the audience?"

"What we do is what you get, and that includes the mistakes and blurs. But I'm convinced that's why we work."

He pauses, puffing a cigarette and rubbing his eyes thoughtfully when he recalls some showtime difficult moments.

"I think my longest hour was with Jerry Rubin, one of the Chicago 7 defendants. He was playing by different rules. I'm not Don Rickles. I tried to make sense of what he was saying, but I found myself saying 'ah' a lot."

"I remember when we had on the fathers of Camilla Hall and William Wolfe, two of the SLA members that were killed in the shootout in Los Angeles (in May, 1974). It was about a month afterward and before the show I introduced them to each other. Rev. Hall said 'I'm sorry we had to meet like this.' Then they both started to cry. I'll never forget it."

There is no hesitation when Donahue names his favorite guests.

"I have a special admiration for Ralph Nadar. I'm very impressed with his depth of knowledge, and he has an economy of words. He can get his point across directly."

"I'm fascinated with Muhammed Ali. He's the single most exciting athlete in the world. There's no way you can't watch him."

"Dick Gregory is an interesting man. I think he's an enormously effective communicator."

"I was impressed with Art Carney when we had him on the show — maybe because he's Irish," Donahue says with a smile. "He took time to write me a note after he was on."

Whom would he like to have on that has never been a "Donahue" guest?

"Richard Nixon," he says instantly. "I think that would be the single-most important thing in my career. I'm sorry to see that the interview went to a non-American (Britain's David Frost)."

The demands of television can take their toll on family life, admits Donahue, a recently divorced father of five. But he adds, "I can think of no time that I have ever wanted out."

"If there is anything I don't understand, I admit it. I do scratch my head and say 'I don't understand.' I admire a guy like Johnny Carson who can get a zinger in there. I wish I could."

"At first I thought of myself as a hybrid," the one-time radio news reporter says recalling his show's beginning. "I had no clothes, skinny ties. They found people commenting about how rough I was around the edges."

"Oleg Cassini helped me. Now I get my hair styled and I have nice clothes," he laughs. "I'll admit, it's a nice ego trip. Everyone should have his own talk show."

"But there's a part of me that would like to be wearing the rumpled tweed suit following Henry Kissinger around," he adds. "And if this all blows away, I'd like to get back into news and give my nice clothes to my brother-in-law."

"But when I think of the people who don't like their jobs . . . gee, you're talking to a guy who has had lunch with Bob Hope, played tennis with Billy Jean King.

"It is one of the most exciting growth experiences for anyone. I don't think there's a university that can provide this."

"It doesn't mean I'm smarter, but I'm more aware. Of course everybody's got his 'Mickey Mouse' part of a job, but when you add it up, it's nice. And when someone says to you 'thank you, you're the only show we watch in the daytime,' it really means something."

"Like the woman who came up to me at O'Hare the other day," he says, eyes twinkling.

"She said, 'Aren't you Phil Donahue?' and I said 'yes.' She said, 'Oh, Mr. Donahue, could I ask you something. Could you get me tickets to 'Bozo?'"

TV sets of future may run by the sun

What's ahead for television?

We're not talking about what will be on the TV screen — whether there will be variety shows or westerns or series about two alligators who become private eyes — but about what your TV set will look like in the future.

And there are some exciting things coming. Skinny sets. Sets that project the picture onto large wall-sized screens. Sets that tell time. Sets, like phonographs, on which you can project your own library of films.

First, though, television manufacturers are going the same route as automobile manufacturers. Out of necessity, they're becoming energy conscious.

Tucker P. Madawick, RCA's vice-president of design, says that energy conservation is the prime consideration in their design planning for the near term.

"Can the set be driven with 25 to 30 per cent less power?" Madawick asks. "That's what we're worrying about. Utility rates are going up. Power may be getting short. So we have to have sets that deliver the same performance with less power."

Many manufacturers are working with sets that will be battery-driven as an alternative to the normal plug-in electricity source. These will be able to produce pictures as good or better than today's but demanding less power to do so.

That's the practical future. But in the realm of the more exotic, there's the video disc system. Using discs that look like phonograph records, you will be able to slip them into a player-unit attached to your TV set and project on your own screen a variety of prerecorded shows — movies, educational things, musical performances, whatever.

This device is almost available now, but at prohibitive cost. By 1978, Madawick says, they will be down to the $500-$600 range.

Another problem, besides price, to be licked before the video disc can become widespread is the matter of grooves. The ones now have 5,555 grooves per inch, and a disc will produce a half-hour of picture per side. They'd like to squeeze an hour on each side, so a disc will be able to give you a complete movie.

But that means finding a way to squeeze some 10,000 or so grooves to the inch. That's a lot of grooves.

Another company, however, has developed a video disc system with discs that have no grooves and are played by a laser beam, thus eliminating the problem of too many grooves.

Projection TV is another gimmick that's here now, but with limitations. At the moment, their use is confined to a sprinkling of high-class bars and restaurants, where it is a gimmick, like TV itself was in its infancy.

"The picture quality is not there yet," Madawick says, "but people get involved when they see it. After all, they're seeing events on big screens — four-by-six or five-by-seven."

It will obviously take some years and some improvements before projection TV is ready for home use. But it, like the video discs, is coming.

Coming, too, are sets that are skinnier, front to rear. In the experimental stages now are sets that are only three inches deep, including screen and everything. The use of miniaturized components makes that possible.

Also in the dim distance are sets that are powered by solar energy. Coupled with the narrower design, this will enable you to tote a TV set, briefcase-sized, with you wherever you go. You won't need a plug or a battery — just a sunny day.

Remote controls for TV sets are here now, but this feature will become standard in the home in not too many years. In fact, Madawick believes the sets in a few years will have no controls on them at all. The only way you will be able to turn them on and off, switch channels and control volume will be by a little box which you can set on your coffee table.

Even now, RCA has an advanced type of remote control gizmo called a Control Center. Madawick demonstrated it. It looks like a fat calculator.

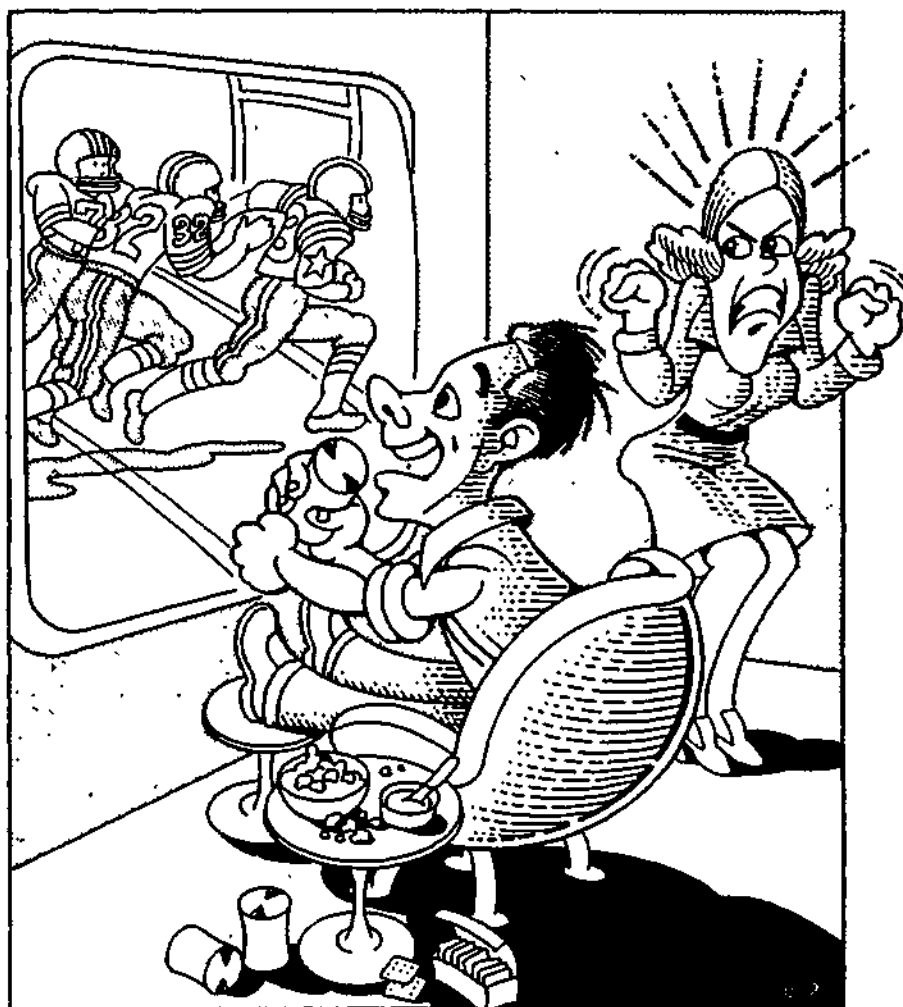

Turn the set on via the Control Center and the first thing that happens is the time flashes on the screen. He says that ultimately this can be programmed to project other vital statistics if you want — pollen count, temperature, pollution count.

Another development is sets which automatically adjust themselves to the brightness of the room. Turn it on in daytime, with sunlight streaming in, and they look fine. As the sun sets and the room becomes darker, they automatically brighten themselves to compensate for the natural light conditions.

Because of our nation's increasing mobility, TV set sales are following that trend. Today, 70 per cent of TV sales are in the portable area, with only 30 per cent the big consoles.

So, naturally, the set manufacturers are aiming at this portable market with smaller and more lightweight sets. And colors are getting wilder, to appeal to the younger people.

But consoles are still selling, although tastes in styling are changing, Madawick says.

"The most difficult trend to track is consumer taste," he says. "In the old days, we could anticipate them, but it's tough today. The market is breaking down with strong demographic profiles, regional and ethnic."

For example, he says they can't move early American or colonial-styled sets in New York. The only thing they'll buy there are sets styled in contemporary or Spanish or Mediterranean. And yet colonial sets sell well in California.

So the future for TV sets seems interesting — but the big problem still remains. What will we see on them?

Van Dyke, Moore reunite on special

Dick Van Dyke thinks so.

"There's comedy all over the television tube," said Van Dyke. "Surely people don't sit down and watch it all."

"There must be a situation comedy of some vintage on the air all night long. They even rerun my series, which is more than 10 years old."

"Some of the shows are very good. But most of them are senseless pap. Just not funny. Personally, I love 'Barney Miller' and 'M*A*S*H.' They are beautifully done."

Van Dyke is a scarred veteran of the sitcom wars. He is an inveterate, if somewhat punchy, viewer who qualifies as an authority on the subject.

His "Dick Van Dyke Show" was once a landmark of sophistication among sitcoms. Subsequently he succumbed to mediocrity in "The New Dick Van Dyke Show" which died a merciful death.

Convinced the genre has reached a saturation point, he will not attempt situation comedy again.

"I did a sitcom pilot for ABC last year and hated it," he said. "I played a comic strip artist, a bachelor with a little boy. How's that for a believable situation? It didn't work."

"Now NBC is coming up with 'The Cop and the Kid,' about a white cop who takes in a black juvenile."

"Every year I get about 40 script treatments suggesting I star in a series about a boarding house full of weird people. Quite a few wanted me to play a family man who returns to college."

"Bob Crane tried that last season and it didn't work either."

"I have no idea where comedy is going. Today most sitcoms are a half hour of closeup of the cast bouncing one-liners at each other. They bear no resemblance to reality."

Despite his disenchantment with the state of video comedy, Van Dyke continues to pursue the elusive laugh. Thursday he will star in "Van Dyke and Company," an hour of fun and nonsense with Mary Tyler Moore and Carl Reiner. Mary was his costar for five years and Reiner his producer-sidekick.

The show is an NBC-TV test run for a projected weekly musical-variety series.

"When I first heard about the 'family hour' I told myself that's where I belong. I've done all the situation comedy I ever want to do," he said. "My humor appeals to children as much as adults. Maybe more."

"NBC gave me complete artistic control. It's full of family-hour silliness and belly laughs, which is what I like."

"As rehearsals went along I found more and more ideas for future shows. I'm willing to bet there are several places where people watching their sets alone will laugh out loud."

"There is plenty of slapstick, stuff you hate yourself for doing later, but you laugh anyhow."

Van Dyke's reunion with Miss Moore is the show's highlight.

"Mary looks terrific," he said. "It was as if we'd been working together without a break all these years."

"The producers had scheduled two days for our segment together. She walked in at 8 o'clock in the morning and it was a breeze. We had it done by 10 o'clock. Mary is just fantastic."

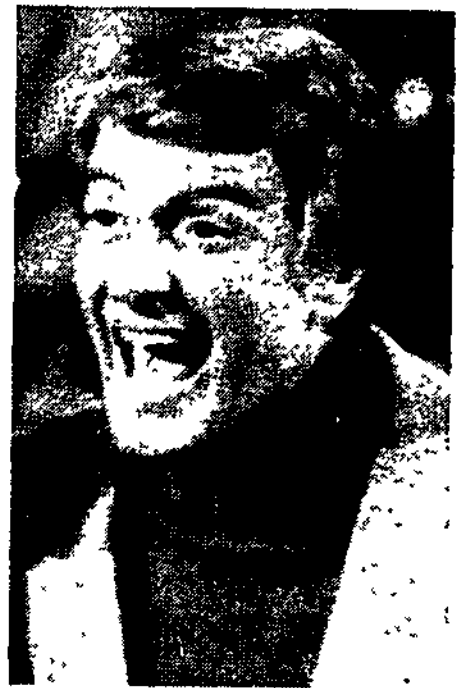

"This is far and away the best special I've done. From the first concept to the finished tape it's exactly what I wanted. I wouldn't change a frame."

"I'm working hard to make this a series, even if it does mean moving back to Hollywood."

Van Dyke, long a Hollywood expatriate, owns a desert hideaway in Cave Creek, Ariz. He now makes his permanent home on Coronado Island, San Diego.

"Let me put it this way," he concluded. "I like this show so well I'm willing to make the sacrifice."

Joan Fontaine likes being a star

NEW YORK (UPI) — Joan Fontaine seldom appears on television, and the reason is as simple as an unscrambled bank statement — television doesn't pay enough.

She is going to make her first television appearance in a dramatic role in more than a decade, and it isn't for the money — it's for love of the script with a hard nudge from the work ethic.

The actress will appear in a special two-hour episode of CBS' "Cannon," air date at this stage still unknown. She plays a movie star of the 1940s whose son has become the target of a crime syndicate. She was asked during an interview why she so seldom appeared on the home screen.

The answer was money.

"Television pays so badly compared to movies or theater," she said in her soft, clear voice. "I've been doing dinner theater, and the salaries are much better than television."

"Television doesn't even pay well compared to lectures — I've been doing one hour lectures all over the country and I get quite a lot."

She handles her own business affairs and writes her own lectures, including the one she has been delivering on "Hollywood, the Golden Years," and one she has just researched and written, "America: Three Centuries Through the Words of her Women Poets."

"In Hollywood in the old days we made money so fast we literally didn't know how to spend it. Once I called in my lawyer, my business manager and my tax man and told them I thought I should have more investments. 'Whatever for?' was their answer. Perhaps they were afraid if we saved enough money we'd retire."

"I've saved more money since I've been handling my own affairs than I've ever done. And had more fun."

She found herself involved in the "Cannon" episode after she went out to California to play some golf.

"I read the script when I had been in California for three weeks and was becoming terribly restless. I think I would have done the telephone book if Bell had called me."

"It's terrible, but I was brought up with the work ethic and I just can't understand anyone who doesn't work. Why do they get out of bed in the morning?"

After the interview she planned a shopping expedition for the "Cannon" stint.

"This part calls for nine costume changes, and I love it. But I have to provide my own wardrobe."

In the golden days of the Hollywood she lectures about, studio designers would whip up a star's wardrobe, which she could buy for half-price after the film was made.

"When I did a television commercial," Miss Fontaine said, "they sent me two girls in blue jeans. I did my own wardrobe."

"It takes concentration to be a star — you have to look right, dress right, speak right, travel first class all the way or you just don't go. A few years ago I went to London and thought that instead of spending all that money and staying at Claridge's, I'd stay at a less expensive hotel. Perfectly nice, but less expensive."

"I called the American embassy and said, 'This is Joan Fontaine.' The person at the embassy asked where I was staying and I told him. They never called me back. Either they thought the call was a hoax, or they decided if I was that down on my luck, they didn't want to hear from me."

"To be a star you must have all the accoutrements. You don't stay a star unless you fight for it — and after all, you had to work hard enough to get there. It's a pity there are so few stars any more — it's a nice thing to be."

Mariette Hartley

Would you please let me know if the girl who does the telephone commercials (about cutting down on calls to information) is Rosemary Forsythe? My husband and I watched "The War Lord" recently, and I say the girl in the commercial is NOT Rosemary, but Mariette Hartley. Please reply. The purchase of a dishwasher is at stake. Thank you.

M.D.A.

Lucky you. Mariette Hartley does appear in those commercials. Goodbye dishwasher hands, hello repair bills.

Please tell me who plays Barbarino on "Welcome Back, Kotter." Also, where can I write to him?

W.S.

John Travolta plays that part and you can write to him in care of Phil Gersh Agency, Inc., 222 N. Canon Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif., 90210.

Could you please tell me where I can write to Cindy Fisher, the young actress who made an appearance on "The Waltons" this last season?

O.K. Send your letters to Cindy in care of Mary Murphy Agency, 10701 Riverside Dr., Tuluca Lake, Calif., 91602.

I seem to recall that during the 60's there was a TV series about a family on their way out West. There were five or six children and they were orphaned. One of the girls was Barbara Hershey Seagull.

Could you please tell us the name of that series...it's driving us crazy!

L.G.

You're probably thinking of the 1966-67 series, "The Monroes." The five orphaned children starring in the show were Michael Anderson, Jr., Barbara Hershey, Keith and Kevin Schultz and Tammy Locke.

Please settle an argument. Has Dr. Steve Hardy ever been married to Nurse Jessie Brewer on the soap opera

"General Hospital"?

L.J.W.

Nope. Emily McLaughlin (Jessie) was formerly married to actor Robert Lansing and the late Jeffrey Hunter. John Berardino (Steve) was formerly married to the late actress-writer Clarissa Hughes and is presently married to the former Marjorie Binder.

Could you please tell me how long the original "Jeff's Collie" ran? Also, how old is Jeff, who starred in that show?

M.J.

Tommy Rettig, who starred as Jeff on that show, was born on December 10, 1941. "Jeff's Collie Starring Lassie" ran from 1954-57. The other members of that original cast were Jan Clayton and George Cleveland. When Tommy outgrew his role, the new family consisted of John Provost, June Lockhart, John Sheppard and George Chandler.

Frontier life to be celebrated at fort

Life on the Illinois frontier in the 1770s will be recreated Nov. 1 and 2 during the second annual "Fort Massac: 1776" observance at Fort Massac State Park, Metropolis, Ill.

Visitors will see what life was like on the frontier when the fort was an important military and trading post of the Illinois country — first for the French, then for the English and finally, for the young U.S.

Booming 18th Century cannon, sounds of soldiers drilling, tomahawk throwing, musket contests and the smell of frontier cookery will provide the background.

Local artisans will demonstrate butter churning, quilting, spinning, weaving, natural dyeing, soap making, leather working, candle dipping and other pioneer crafts.

Contests open to visitors include tobacco spitting and corn husking and shelling, fiddling and a bucket-brigade tourney.

Activities start at noon each day and continue until 5 p.m. Metropolis is in the southern part of the state, near the Illinois-Kentucky border.

Old Chicago sets specials for Halloween

Children will have an opportunity to trick or treat Friday at Old Chicago shopping center and amusement park, Bolingbrook.

Merchants will hand out free candy to trick or treaters from 3 to 9 p.m. During that time, all persons in costume will be admitted to the amusement park free.

A new ride, The Haunted House, will open on Halloween. The journey to see ghosts and goblins will cost 80 cents.

Walter Browne hottest item in U.S. game

Walter Browne, the 1974 and 1975 U.S. Champion, is unquestionably the hottest thing in American chess today. His continual tournament success bodes well for his prediction that he will someday be world champion.

A case in point is his accomplishment in the just played and celebrated tournament in Milan. He tied for fifth and sixth places with former world champ Michael Tal, and finished ahead of such world class stalwarts as Andersson, Gligoric and Larsen. He finished only one point behind world champion Karpov!

Despite Walter's steady climb upward, he still naturally loses some, as against the late Paul Keres some months ago at Tallinn.

Diagram 1 shows a position which can easily be judged as innocuous. Material is absolutely even, and the position is more or less symmetrical with the exception of Browne's wandering rook.

But here Keres was able to seize the initiative with the thematic 1... P-Q4! Browne's king side action will not sufficiently compensate for his opponent's control and threats in the center and on the seventh rank. And black's centralized pieces will also simultaneously have their effect on events on the flank.

Shelby Lyman on chess

After 1... P-Q4, the ensuing moves were 2. Q-K2, Q-Q2; 3. N-R4, P-P; 4. P-P, Q-R-Q1; 5. N-B5, Q-Q7; 6. Q-B3, R-K3 (defending the knight in case of 7. N-P check); 7. R-N3, P-N3 (the black queen holds the rook pawn); and 8.

R-KB1 (a waiting move), reaching Diagram 2.

We can now see that black has been outplayed. If Keres can put an end to white's king side threats, he will be able to win easily.

His next move, 8... Q-B5, sealed Browne's doom. The try 9. QxQ, PxQ; 10. NxP check, K-N2; 11. R-R3, R-R1!, would lose a piece. All other variations drop at least a pawn.

Browne did his best with 9. R-Q1, R(3)-K1; 10. N-K7 check, K-N2; 11. N-Q5, QxQ; 12. RxQ in Diagram 3. But after 12. P-B3; 13. N-K3, RxR check; 14. NxR, R-Q1; 15. N-K3, NxP; Keres had not only won the pawn but had retained his advantage in the center. A few moves later Browne resigned.

The game is an edifying example of how a general advantage (the initiative in the center) can quickly bear real fruit with logical and not-hard-to-understand moves. (c) 1975, Enterprise Science News

Illinois history airs in TV special

"Listen to The Land," a Bicentennial special that tells the story of the Illinois Territory, will be aired at 6 p.m. tonight on NBC.

The program shows land in Southern Illinois that is virtually the same today as in the mid-to late-1700s. Four storytellers playing Frenchmen, a frontiersman and a pioneer woman describe what happened when Illinois was occupied by foreign soldiers nearly 200 years ago.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

With a 2-2 break in diamonds or a 3-3 break in clubs six diamonds is a cinch. Actually, if both suits break South will make seven.

The spade lead gave South an extra chance and he made it by falling into a spade-heart squeeze against West.

Of course, good players don't fall into squeezes. They tend to play in such manner that if all else fails a squeeze may develop.

Dummy's jack of spades forced East's ace at trick one. South ruffed, entered dummy with a trump, led a club to the ace, a second diamond to dummy, a second club to the king.

Then he tried to ruff a club, but East over-ruffed and forced South with a spade. South ruffed a club with dummy's last trump, came back to his hand with the king of hearts and cashed his last trump and last club.

The last club squeezed West. He had to unguard his queen-jack of hearts to hold on to the king of spades. The queen of spades was discarded from dummy and the last two tricks were won by the ace and 10 of hearts.

Would South have made the hand if East had failed to over-ruff? Yes, he would. He would draw trumps, concede a club and wind up with the same squeeze.

Old-style ice cream parlor at museum

"Yesterday's Main Street," the cobblestoned, gas-lit Chicago street of 1910 at the Museum of Science and Industry, has a new attraction — Finnigan's Ice Cream Parlor.

Sodas, sundaes, banana splits and other ice cream concoctions are sold at the parlor. Many of its furnishings have come from the old Finnigan's Pharmacy which had its beginnings a few blocks away from the museum in 1911. The ice cream parlor has been designed to appear as near to the old pharmacy as possible.

Ice cream parlor mementos are displayed throughout the room. Items include old-fashioned pewter molds and glassware.

Finnigan's Ice Cream Parlor is open from 11:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. weekdays and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

Lindahl says pilot oil recycling program works

The Des Plaines motor oil recycling program has collected 1,360 gallons of oil in its first five months of operation.

Philip Lindahl, city environmental officer, said Friday he is satisfied with the success of the program, but would like to have more residents participate in the oil recycling project.

"We're pleased, but we're always wanting more," he said. "We encourage people to bring their oil over because we can use all we can get."

Des Plaines is participating along with Glen Ellyn and Naperville in the program which is a pilot effort sponsored by the Illinois Dept. of Business and Economic Development. State officials hope the program will encourage motorists to recycle oil as a means of reducing the nation's energy shortage.

LINDAHL SAID researchers have estimated that a statewide recycling program is being studied closely to determine the effect a statewide program would have on the energy shortage.

Residents who want to participate in the program can bring their used motor oil to the Des Plaines recycling center, Oakton Street east of Lee Street. The center is open Tuesday and Thursday from 4 to 8 p.m., Saturday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday from 1 to 6 p.m.

The used oil is collected in a 300-gallon underground tank and taken to the Motor Oil Refining Co., Lyons, to be re-refined. Lindahl said about 60 per cent of the oil can be salvaged as a result of the re-refining process.

The Des Plaines phase of the program will be monitored by students from Oakton Community College in an effort to gather data on the impact of the project.

In addition to oil, the Des Plaines recycling center accepts newspapers, glass and cans.

Hand grenade found behind church

A construction crew Friday found a hand grenade buried behind the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, 382 S. Mount Prospect Rd., Des Plaines.

Congress bid today by GOP candidate

Daniel Hales, candidate for the Republican nomination for the 10th District Congressional seat, will officially open his campaign today.

Hales will host an open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. today at his campaign headquarters, 1415 Waukegan Rd., Northbrook.

The Sheriff's Police bomb and arson squad was called to the church shortly after 10 a.m. The grenade was removed without incident.

The construction crew from Milburn Brothers of Mount Prospect was digging a ditch for piping as part of a new drainage system for the church parking lot when the grenade was found.

"At first we didn't know it was a grenade," said Ronald Renkiewicz, the crew foreman. "We found an iron weight first, right next to it."

BRUNO MACRITO, thinking it was just another piece of iron, picked up the grenade and threw it back into the hole.

Renkiewicz said he called police because if it were left under ground, "someone could dig it up later and it would go off and they'd get hurt." The grenade was found five feet down under the parking area, which is near the east end of Michael Road.

No one appeared particularly concerned that the grenade might explode before police arrived because the crew continued their work.

Sheriff's Policeman Irwin Kraut, who took the grenade, said, "The thing is so corroded it's secure for right now. I wouldn't want to wash it off though."

He later said the grenade had been buried for a long time, possibly since World War II and added that perhaps someone buried it as a means of disposing of it.

THE REV. H. D. WAGNER said he had no idea how the grenade could have been buried on the church's property. "I haven't the foggiest notion," he said.

Rev. Wagner said the church has been on the property since 1962 and the property was residential before then.

Wrigley clocks bow out as Daylight Saving ends

At 2 a.m. Sunday, a maintenance man at the Wrigley Building on Michigan Avenue will pull the switch on the Chicago area's most famous clocks beginning the ritual of changing from daylight saving time to standard time.

The electricity will shut off and the 7½-foot-tall hour hands and 11½-foot-tall second hands will cease moving for one hour. Sixty minutes later the timepieces will be set in motion.

Daylight saving time is about to end, despite efforts in Congress to keep it alive in new format.

GOVERNMENT REPORTS show that the nation saved energy, reduced urban crime and experienced a decline in the number of fatal auto accidents during the two-year daylight saving time trial basis. The test had the country on eight months of daylight saving time and four months of standard time. The experiment ends Sunday.

To the Wrigley Building people it doesn't much matter when they have to fix their clocks. It's all done by remote control. No super human with the wing span of a prehistoric bird is needed to move the dials.

"There's nobody who uses his little pinky and gives it (the clock) a turn," said Robert Ryan, building superintendent. "Changing the clocks is unromantic and uninteresting."

The clockwork was completed in 1921 with the structure built into the surface of the building. The clocks are driven by a series of impulses which moves the hands minute-by-minute.

THE SOPHISTICATED electrical system is controlled in the basement. It is hooked into the 25 clocks inside the building, built by the architectural firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst and White. The cost of running the clocks is small, Ryan said.

The only thing to worry about is when to restart the clocks so they synchronize correctly. The procedure is done every six months (moving the clocks ahead takes about 30 seconds worth of impulses) from now on unless new legislation permanently puts the nation on daylight saving time eight or nine months of the year.

Before the trial period daylight saving time was in effect for six months, from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October.

New York woes batter market; Dow down 14.64

He talks to the animals

Charlie Hume's friends appear on television, in magazines and as stars of advertisements

by STIRLING MORITA

The way Charlie Hume puts it: "There aren't a lot of nuts like me who go all out for animals."

And if you look closely, chances are some of Charlie's exotic animals would have appeared, gracing magazine pages or the television screen. Whether it be Friendly, the lovely llama, modeling South American jewelry for a full-page ad in New Yorker magazine, or a bank commercial with rabbits, magically multiplying on the screen.

Or Louie, the kissing llama, nuzzling female members of a television crew during the credits of a TV documentary show.

AND IF YOU were around in 1955, you might have seen Hume sitting alongside John Daly in "What's My Line?" Charlie's line at the time was breeding skunks.

Hume says the television appearance gave him such notoriety that letters addressed to "Charles Hume, Chicago, Ill.," made their way to his Des Plaines mailbox. He has come a long way since he started raising guinea pigs in the basement of his Des Plaines home. Now, he raises everything from white mice and aoudads to multi-colored macaws and camels at his 80-acre Woodstock farm and his 2½-acre site near Golf and Arlington Heights roads, Arlington Heights.

But his job is not just supplying animals for ads. A majority of it is providing them for pets, zoos, Safari-Lands and research laboratories from his company, Scientific Animal Lab and Farm Inc. He also distributes feed for the area from the Ralston-Purina Co. as Scientific Animal Feeds Inc.

BUT THE EMPHASIS with Hume has always been on breeding unusual animals or ones that are on the endangered species list. The reason? It is a challenge, Hume says.

something when others are having a difficult time propagating them," he points out. "If someone doesn't help them propagate, there won't be any left."

He notes there is somewhat of a challenge in successfully breeding macaws because people have had trouble getting the birds to generate offspring. Hume adds he wants to keep endangered species such as Ceropsia, rare Australian geese and northern kitfoxes from extinction.

Other animals he has bred are Oriental pheasants, zebras, all types of deer, parrots, antelope, African and Hawaiian sheep, guinea pigs and knee-high African pigmy goats — the list continues.

HUME SAYS he thinks he was "born" to love animals. As a child in Missouri, he captured wild animals, hoping to tame them for pets. "I figure my folks thought I would end up in a zoo — on one side or the other of the bars."

He went to the University of Illinois, Urbana, where he earned degrees in zoology and mammalogy. It was there he took up the hobby of raising skunks, starting with one from a research project. Hume became an authority on skunks and later wrote a book about raising skunks. From there, he went to work for a pharmaceutical firm and began to raise guinea pigs.

Hume says he never dreamed his animal kingdom would grow this large. Jobs in the animal field are hard to find, he says, and many animal farms fail. Hume points to "diversification" in aiding his success.

In any given month, there may be as many as 15,000 young animals born — many of which are mice. Hume says he tries not to get attached to animals he knows will be leaving. Breeding is his purpose. "My main concern is they get the right food and the right environment."

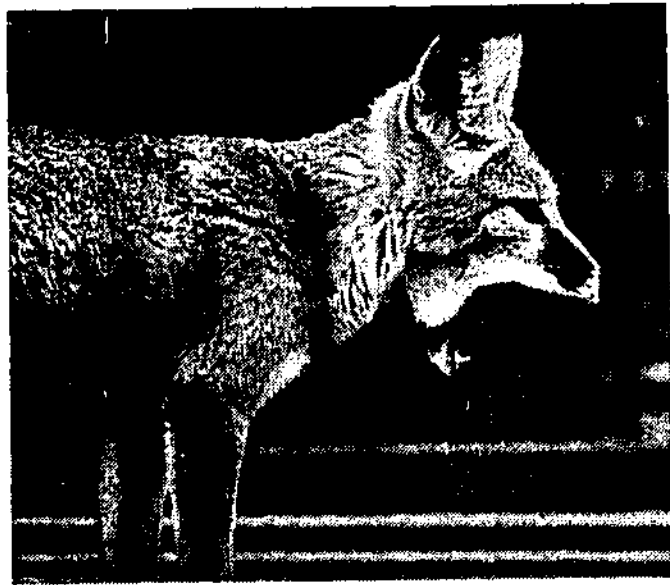

BUT THERE ARE some that come close to Hume's heart. Besides Friendly and Louie, Hume favors his African grey parrot, Cleo, who possesses a mastery of the English language.

Hume says although he would love to open his animal paradise to the public, he allows visiting by appointment only.

It is a full-time job for him, seven days a week — with him often working late into the night. But he loves every second and wouldn't have it any other way.

If River Trails fails

Wheeling parks may seek annex vote

Wheeling Park District officials are expected to begin work on a referendum of their own if today's River Trails Park District annexation vote fails.

Wheeling Park District officials are expected to begin work on a referendum of their own if today's River Trails Park District annexation vote fails.

"I'm sure the board will take this up and I would expect we'd begin work immediately on a referendum if River Trails fails to annex the property in question," said Phillips.

THE RIVER TRAILS Park District proposal calls for annexation of an area bounded by Palatine, Old Willow, River and Wolf roads. The 320-acre area includes several apartment complexes with an estimated 3,500 residents. Apartments in the proposed annexation include Gladstone Glen, Loch Lomond, Apple Tree, Willow Park and Willow River apartments and the Quincy Park quadromains.

Two other apartment complexes, Willow Bend and Lake Run, are not included in today's referendum because they are located on privately-owned parcels of more than 20 acres, requiring a special agreement be-

Polls open 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. today at four locations for River Trails Park District's annexation referendum.

Residents of apartments in an area bounded by Palatine, Wolf, River and Old Willow roads must vote to come into the district and current district residents must vote to accept them. About 3,500 residents live in the proposed annexation area.

Park district residents may vote on annexation at the park district office, 1313 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect.

Residents of Gladstone Glen apartments may vote at Stevenson School, 1375 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling; residents of Quincy Park quadromains may vote at 1515 Quaker Ln.; and polls will be set up at the Flamingo Hotel, 1246 River Rd. for residents of Willow River, Loch Lomond, Apple Tree and Willow Park apartments.

tween the owner and park district for annexation.

Phillips said the Wheeling district has circulated more than 3,000 information sheets and talked to most residents in the annexation area in an effort to stall the River Trails annexation.

"We've talked to about everyone, trying to tell them that we can offer a lot of programs River Trails can't," said Phillips. "We're not trying to tear down what work they have done, because they have a program they can be proud of. We're just trying to show what advantages we can offer them."

PHILLIPS SAID Wheeling's district has "twice" the number of park programs that River Trails offers.

Wheeling attempted to get an annexation referendum off the ground earlier this year, but failed because of "legal work" which had to be completed.

"When we pulled out, they (River Trails) jumped in and that's where things are now," he said.

River Trails officials have disputed Wheeling's claims of superiority, saying they can build a park near the apartment complexes without a special bond issue should voters choose to annex.

"Our park facilities are much closer to the area than are Wheeling's," said River Trails Park Director Marvin Weiss. "I think we're in a better position to provide service."

Wrigley clocks bow out as Daylight Saving ends

At 2 a.m. Sunday, a maintenance man at the Wrigley Building on Michigan Avenue will pull the switch on the Chicago area's most famous clocks beginning the ritual of changing from daylight saving time to standard time.

The electricity will shut off and the 7½-foot-tall hour hands and 11½-foot-tall second hands will cease moving for one hour. Sixty minutes later the timepieces will be set in motion.

Daylight saving time is about to end, despite efforts in Congress to keep it alive in new format.

GOVERNMENT REPORTS show that the nation saved energy, reduced urban crime and experienced a decline in the number of fatal auto accidents during the two-year daylight saving time trial basis. The test had the country on eight months of daylight saving time and four months of standard time. The experiment ends Sunday.

To the Wrigley Building people it doesn't much matter when they have to fix their clocks. It's all done by remote control. No super human with the wing span of a prehistoric bird is needed to move the dials.

"There's nobody who uses his little pinky and gives it (the clock) a turn," said Robert Ryan, building superintendent. "Changing the clocks is unromantic and uninteresting."

The only thing to worry about is when to restart the clocks so they synchronize correctly. The procedure is done every six months. (moving the clocks ahead takes about 30 seconds worth of impulses) from now on, unless new legislation permanently puts the nation on daylight saving time eight or nine months of the year.

Before the trial period daylight saving time was in effect for six months, from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October.

Dist. 23 chiefs get pay raises

Administrators in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 have received raises ranging from 8 per cent to 10.8 per cent for 1975-76.

Board members refused to reveal the exact amount of administrative salary increases this week when the raises were approved because Assistant Supt. Gerald McGovern objected to having his salary become public knowledge. Supt. Edward Grodsky released the figures Wednesday.

Grodsky got an 8.3 per cent raise, from $27,600 to $29,900. McGovern received a 10.8 per cent salary increase, from $22,100 to $24,500. James Hendren, business manager got an 8.1 per cent raise, from $22,200 to $24,000.

Phillip Arnstein, MacArthur Junior High School principal, remained at the yearly salary for which he was hired in July, $20,500.

Phillip Cornwell, MacArthur's assistant principal, got a 10 per cent increase, from $15,000 to $16,500. Eisenhower's principal, Mary Hyrczyk, got an 8.9 per cent salary hike from $18,950 to $20,650.

Donald Graham, Sullivan's principal, got an 8 per cent raise, from $18,750 to $20,250. Muir's John Finke got a 9.1 per cent increase, from $17,400 to $18,900. Ross principal Sally Friedlan got a 9 per cent increase, from $16,500 to $18,000.

Heliport change to park lot for mall OK'd by state

An application to convert a heliport near Buffalo Grove and Dundee roads into a parking lot for a small shopping center has been approved by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

William Simpson, owner of the heliport, said few helicopters have used the landing site in recent years. The area was certified by the state in 1962 as a heliport.

Simpson petitioned the state last month to convert the area into a parking lot for the Cambridge Commons shopping center, which he said would be a better use for the site.

Simpson told the state the site will be paved and can still be used as a helicopter landing site in emergencies.

The state's approval calls for the work to be completed in a year. Simpson has the right to seek an extension if he is unable to meet the deadline and can show good cause for seeking more time.

Simpson had no comment on the matter Friday.

On Monday's agenda

Trustees to weigh $5,000 parkway tree replacement

A $5,000 parkway tree replacement program will be presented for approval Monday to the Buffalo Grove Board of Trustees.

Charles McCoy, public works director, hopes to replace approximately 67 dead trees in the village. Each tree, to be planted by public works crews, is estimated to cost $75.

The tree replacement program, an annual service conducted by the village, is free of charge to residents who request new trees.

The department has compiled a list of more than 170 requests for tree replacement, but because of the high cost of new trees and availability of funds, the village will fill requests that have been on the list the longest, McCoy said.

If McCoy's request is approved by the board, tree replacement will begin immediately. The village either will ask for bids to be let or for price quotations from area nurseries.

Village Mgr. Daniel T. Larson said some residents have not had dead trees replaced in front of their homes for as long as two years. Nevertheless, the tree planting program is "one of the few things village residents can see their government provide," Larson said.

He now works half-time

Walsh seeks full-time policeman

Buffalo Grove Police Chief Harry J. Walsh Jr. has requested that a half-time officer be made full time to ease the strain of personnel needs in the department.

Walsh said he would like to make the department's general service officer position, now held by Robert Heer, a full-time position because "we're feeling the strain."

The police department has had no increase in personnel for more than two years. Until village funds are allocated in May, 1976, to hire additional employees, the department will not have expanded for three years, Walsh said.

The police department has asked for two additional patrolmen, but the positions cannot be filled because of tight finances.

WALSH SAID more than a 250 per cent increase in complaints has been handled by the police since 1972. For example, in August 1972, the department handled 445 complaints, and in August, 1973, 1,017 complaints.

The "steady increase in demands for service" has resulted in a larger work load for the force, Walsh said. "We're getting very close to the point where this will adversely affect quality of work and their own safety," Walsh wrote in a letter to Village Mgr. Daniel T. Larson.

Heer, who was hired as assistant general service officer for the summer this year, has demonstrated himself a valuable employee, Walsh said. Heer had increased dog license sales, almost doubling the total of sales for the same period last year.

With two full-time general service officers, the force could insure that other ordinances are obeyed, including those concerning fire lanes, garbage, weeds and sprinkling.

In the winter months, the two officers can handle non-criminal and non-emergency type calls.

THE SALARY OF the full-time position will be $4,752 for a six-month period from November 1, 1975, to April 30, 1976. The department also must spend approximately $330 for insurance coverage and uniform expenses.

The change to the full-time position will help the police force meet work demands, especially when reserves will go into training from November to June.

Wrigley clocks bow out as Daylight Saving ends

At 2 a.m. Sunday, a maintenance man at the Wrigley Building on Michigan Avenue will pull the switch on the Chicago area's most famous clocks beginning the ritual of changing from daylight saving time to standard time.

The electricity will shut off and the 7½-foot-tall hour hands and 11½-foot-tall second hands will cease moving for one hour. Sixty minutes later the timepieces will be set in motion.

Daylight saving time is about to end, despite efforts in Congress to keep it alive in new format.

GOVERNMENT REPORTS show that the nation saved energy, reduced urban crime and experienced a decline in the number of fatal auto accidents during the two-year daylight saving time trial basis. The test had the country on eight months of daylight saving time and four months of standard time. The experiment ends Sunday.

To the Wrigley Building people it doesn't much matter when they have to fix their clocks. It's all done by remote control. No super human with the wing span of a prehistoric bird is needed to move the dials.

"There's nobody who uses his little pinky and gives it (the clock) a turn," said Robert Ryan, building superintendent. "Changing the clocks is unromantic and uninteresting."

The clockwork was completed in 1921 with the structure built into the surface of the building. The clocks are driven by a series of impulses which moves the hands minute-by-minute.

THE SOPHISTICATED electrical system is controlled in the basement. It is hooked into the 25 clocks inside the building, built by the architectural firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst and White. The cost of running the clocks is small, Ryan said.

The only thing to worry about is when to restart the clocks so they synchronize correctly. The procedure is done every six months (moving the clocks ahead takes about 30 seconds worth of impulses) from now on unless new legislation permanently puts the nation on daylight saving time eight or nine months of the year.

Before the trial period daylight saving time was in effect for six months, from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October.

He talks to the animals

Charlie Hume's friends appear on television, in magazines and as stars of advertisements

by STIRLING MORITA

The way Charlie Hume puts it: "There aren't a lot of nuts like me ... who go all out for animals."

And if you look closely, chances are some of Charlie's exotic animals would have appeared, gracing magazine pages or the television screen. Whether it be Friendly, the lovely llama, modeling South American jewelry for a full-page ad in New Yorker magazine, or a bank commercial with rabbits, magically multiplying on the screen.

Or Louie, the kissing llama, nuzzling female members of a television crew during the credits of a TV documentary show.

AND, IF YOU were around in 1935, you might have seen Hume sitting alongside John Daly in "What's My Line?" Charlie's line at the time was breeding skunks.

Hume says the television appearance gave him such notoriety that letters addressed to "Charles Hume, Chicago, Ill.," made their way to his Des Plaines mailbox. He has come a long way since he started raising guinea pigs in the basement of his Des Plaines home. Now, he raises everything from white mice and soundads to multi-colored macaws and camels at his 80-acre Woodstock farm and his 2½-acre site near Golf and Arlington Heights roads, Arlington Heights.

But his job is not just supplying animals for ads. A majority of it is providing them for pets, zoos, Safari-lands and research laboratories from his company, Scientific Animal Lab and Farm Inc. He also distributes feed for the area from the Ralston-Purina Co. as Scientific Animal Feeds Inc.

BUT THE EMPHASIS with Hume has always been on breeding unusual animals or ones that are on the endangered species list. The reason? It is a challenge, Hume says.

something when others are having a difficult time propagating them," he points out. "If someone doesn't help them propagate, there won't be any left."

He notes there is somewhat of a challenge in successfully breeding macaws because people have had trouble getting the birds to generate offspring. Hume adds he wants to keep endangered species such as Caspian, rare Australian geese and northern kinkajous from extinction.

Other animals he has bred are Oriental pheasants, zebras, all types of deer, parrots, antelope, African and Hawaiian sheep, guinea pigs and knee-high African pigmy goats — the list continues.

HUME SAYS he thinks he was "born" to love animals. As a child in Missouri, he captured wild animals, hoping to tame them for pets. "I figure my folks thought I would end up in a zoo — on one side or the other of the bars."

He went to the University of Illinois, Urbana, where he earned degrees in zoology and mammalogy. It was there he took up the hobby of raising skunks, starting with one from a research project. Hume became an authority on skunks and later wrote a book about raising skunks. From there, he went to work for a pharmaceutical firm and began to raise guinea pigs.

Hume says he never dreamed his animal kingdom would grow this large. Jobs in the animal field are hard to find, he says, and many animal farms fail. Hume points to "diversification" in aiding his success.

In any given month, there may be as many as 16,000 young animals born — many of which are mice. Hume says he tries not to get attached to animals he knows will be leaving. Breeding is his purpose. "My main concern is they get the right food and the right environment."

BUT THERE ARE some that come close to Hume's heart. Besides Friendly and Louie, Hume favors his African grey parrot, Cleo, who possesses a mastery of the English language.

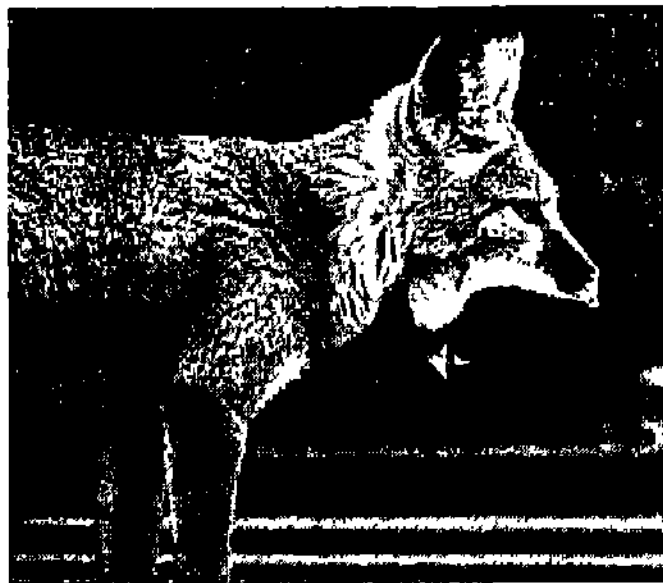

Hume says although he would love to open his animal paradise to the public, he allows visiting by appointment only.

It is a full-time job for him, seven days a week — with him often working late into the night. But he loves every second and wouldn't have it any other way.

State OKs heliport as mall park lot

An application to convert a heliport near Buffalo Grove and Dundee roads into a parking lot for a small shopping center has been approved by the Illinois Dept. of Transportation.

William Simpson, owner of the heliport, said few helicopters have used the landing site in recent years. The area was certified by the state in 1962 as a heliport.

Simpson petitioned the state last month to convert the area into a parking lot for the Cambridge Commons shopping center, which he said would be a better use for the site.

Simpson told the state the site will be paved and can still be used as a helicopter landing site in emergencies.

The state's approval calls for the work to be completed in a year. Simpson has the right to seek an extension if he is unable to meet the deadline and can show good cause for seeking more time.

Simpson had no comment on the matter Friday.

'Jaws' theme to highlight Jaycees' haunted house

A special "Jaws" theme, fashioned after the movie, will be featured at the Buffalo Grove Jaycees' third annual haunted house beginning Sunday at the northeast corner of Lake Cook and Arlington Heights roads.

The haunted house with "spooks and goblins" is suitable for children of all ages, Jaycees said. As a special attraction this year, the Jaycees also will sponsor a carnival with seven rides at the haunted house site.

Admission to the haunted house is 50 cents per person. Tours through the house will begin at 3 p.m. Sunday and end near 10 p.m. Hours Monday through Thursday are from 6:30 to 10:30 p.m. On Halloween the house will open at 6:30 p.m. and tours will be conducted throughout the evening.

The carnival will begin at 3 p.m. Sunday and will follow the same hours as the haunted house. "Strip" tickets of four rides for a dollar will go on sale Monday and Wednesday nights. Ticket prices on other nights will be slightly higher.

There will be two entrances for cars from Arlington Heights Road to the haunted house and carnival site.

Proceeds from the event will be used to support various Jaycee community activities such as July 4 celebrations, Operation Red Ball, Outstanding Educators Awards and Bicentennial projects.

Park improvements planned after bond sale

Several park improvements are planned as soon as the Elk Grove Park District sells $200,000 in general obligation bonds approved this week.

Jack A. Claes, director of parks and recreation, said trees for all parks will be one of the first items purchased. Planting, if possible, would be done before winter.

Also scheduled are resurfacing of several areas, including the main office parking lot; a walkway to Lions Pool from Kennedy Boulevard; and lighted tennis courts, and lighting for an additional ball diamond at Disney Park.

A gazebo or band shelter will be built, although the location has not been determined. "Several sites are being considered, including Disney Park and the land along Salt Creek," said Claes. "We would like to have it ready for the Bicentennial year."

OTHER PLANNED improvements include completion of landscaping at Disney Park; revamping the lights outside Lions Pool; buying some equipment, including a tractor and mower; and preliminary work on the Stevenson School park site.

Claes said the district also will be talking with Elk Grove School Dist. 59 about installing non-skid ceramic tile and hair dryers at Disney Pool.

The park board approved issuing the general obligation bonds this week. Although Comr. Bart K. Dill and Joan E. Brennan were absent, they had approved using the board's non-referendum bonding power for the improvements at a previous board meeting.

Thus, all five board members agreed with the concept, although only three actually voted. By law, the board can increase taxes up to 0.5 per cent of its total assessed valuation without voter approval.

THE TAX IMPACT of the bonds has been called "minimal" by park board members. If the board were to issue $200,000 in bonds for the next six years, as is being considered, next year's taxes would increase 50 cents per $10,000 assessed valuation and up to $5.31 more in 1978.

Taxes would then decrease as the bonds, each of three years maturity, are paid off.

The board decided to act this week for several reasons. One reason is if the sale occurs before Jan. 1 (it is scheduled for Dec. 4), the district will only be charged 12 months' interest rather than 24.

Also, Ron Noreen and Paul D. Speer and Associates, who will handle the sale, said the bond market is cur-

Golf course financing up in the air

The Elk Grove Park District probably could not sell revenue bonds to finance a 9-hole golf course, according to a representative of Paul D. Speer and Associates.

Ron Noreen of the bond consultant firm told the park board this week that the revenue bond market currently is "very sloppy." He added that revenue bond issues, because they are only backed by revenue from the project, are very hard to sell at this time.

Interest for such bonds, even if they could be sold would be close to 8 per cent, Noreen said.

THE PARK BOARD has been considering a revenue-bond issue to finance a par-3, 9-hole course to be built on park-owned property along Salt Creek between Walnut Lane and Kennedy Boulevard.

The feasibility of the golf course has not yet been established and only preliminary investigations have been made.

Park Comr. Lewis L. Smith, who heads the golf course committee, said one architect's estimate has the project costing $350,000. Park Pres. Edward R. Hauser said he disagreed with that estimate and felt $600,000 would be a more realistic estimate.

Noreen said the park district could use a combination of general obligation and revenue bonds if it wanted. He said the smaller the total of revenue bonds needed, the more chance the district would have for a sale of the revenue bonds.

VFW seeks script contest entrants from high schools

The contest is open to all Elk Grove Village high school sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Entries must be brought in between 7:30 and 8:30 p.m. Nov. 28.

Marge Hartig, ladies auxiliary, and Rom Soja, VFW, are co-chairmen. They may be called at 437-1256 and 437-0350 for further information.

CONTEST THEME is "What Our Bicentennial Heritage Means To Me."

Scripts must be recorded on reel-type magnetic tape at 7.5 inches per second speed, using single-track equipment. A standard four- or five-inch reel should be used. Scripts must not be less than three minutes, or longer than five minutes of tape time.

Judging will be on delivery, originality and content of entry. Three Auxiliary and three VFW members will act as judges.

Locally, cash bond awards ranging from $150 to $25 for first-through sixth-place winners will be awarded.

The first-place winner will then be eligible for district, state and national competition.

State winners will be awarded an all expense paid trip to Washington D.C., where the national judging and competition will take place.

Obscene phone calls investigated by police

Elk Grove Village police are investigating a series of about 30 lewd and threatening telephone calls made to village residents over the last several months.

Investigators believe the same man is responsible for all the calls, mostly to women in which he scares them into listening to obscene questions by threatening to harm their families.

Sgt. Ronald Iden said residents receiving such calls should immediately hang up and notify police, "so we know he's continuing to make the calls."

"In a number of cases the victims are going along with him," and answering what Iden termed as "sexually-oriented questions. But there are no reports of harm or no repeat calls being made and there's nothing for these people to fear — he's not going to hurt them."

Two new incidents were reported to police Wednesday. The caller, who apparently picks numbers at random from the phone directory, usually makes his calls in the late morning or early afternoon when he is most likely to find women at home alone, he said.

Such calls also have been reported in Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect, Iden said.

rently at its most favorable level this year. Sold today, the interest rate would be 8 1/2 per cent, he said.

The board also said it wanted to act before January because that would be the next time the City of New York would be subject to possible default on its bond issues. They said the impact of such a default on their bond sale, while probably minimal, is unpredictable.

Parks head Claes gets presidency nod

Jack A. Claes, Elk Grove Park District director of parks and recreation, is one of two persons nominated for president of the Illinois Park and Recreation Society.

Claes currently is serving his second term as conference chairman for the professional organization. The election results are to be announced Nov. 21 during the Illinois Assn. of Park Districts convention. The IAPD is the organization for park board members.

Elk Grove Park District President Edward R. Hauser, said, "It is an honor for us and Jack."

Correction

Pete Wing a Schaumburg Township auditor, was incorrectly identified as a spokesman and member of the Elk Grove Township Board of Auditors in Friday's Herald.

Wing said Schaumburg Township officials gave preliminary approval to a funding request and not Elk Grove Township officials, as the Herald story indicated.

Apartment complex afire, families flee

by JOHN MAES

Fire gutted a Hoffman Estates apartment Friday night, routing a number of residents from a 50-unit building in the Prairie Ridge apartment complex on Bode Road.

The blaze broke out in the apartment of Mark Lee, 414 Bode Rd. No one was injured, and Lee's three children in the apartment at the time managed to escape the flames.

The fire reportedly broke out in a back bedroom of the Lee apartment when a television burst into flames. There was no damage estimate.

Lee's 15-year-old son Timothy, said he had turned the television set on and gone to the kitchen to fix some supper when he smelled smoke. He then alerted his brother Randy, 19, in another room, grabbed his 6-year-old sister, Candy and a pet hamster and fled.

THEIR FATHER was at work at the time and their mother Marilyn had left to go to the store.

Hoffman Estates Fire Chief Carl Selke said one, maybe two, other apartments were damaged by flames. He said several others received smoke and water damage.

Upon arriving, fire crews swept through the three-story building, knocking on doors of apartments and warning residents to evacuate.

One resident, Marcel Gross, who lives in an adjacent apartment, said she was talking on the telephone when a neighbor knocked on the door to tell her there was a fire.

Hoffman Estates firefighter James Dugan, one of the first on the scene said fire crews could see "pitch black smoke" coming from the building while enroute to the blaze.

HE SAID THE smoke was so thick it prevented firemen from entering the building through the front entrance, but the flames were ex-

Officials meet to mull K & B suit

Hoffman Estates officials will meet today in executive session to discuss impending court action brought by Kaufman and Broad Homes, Inc. to obtain building permits for the company's Barrington Square development.

The meeting will be the second closed-door session this week as officials prepare for a court date Tuesday before Circuit Court Judge Walter Dahl.

The meetings have been called so that officials and Village Atty. Edward Hofert can discuss terms surrounding the litigation, which has been pending since June, 1974.

The action was filed by K&B against the village when the village refused to issue building permits for new development in K&B's Barrington Square complex on Barrington and Higgins roads.

The village action came in the wake of convictions of six former village officials on federal bribery charges. The six were found guilty of accepting bribes from K&B in exchange for zoning votes for Barrington Square.

THE COURT CASE was one of two legal actions resulting from the zoning scandal. The other, in which homeowners in Barrington Square charged K&B had inflated the cost of their units to pay for the bribes, has been settled.

That suit sought restitution for the alleged inflated prices, but the homeowners agreed to terms of an out-of-court settlement after almost two years of negotiations with K&B.

Terms of the settlement include a back-tax agreement, $50,000 in cash to the Barrington Square Improvement Assn., tennis courts and a ball diamond and some improvement and repair work in the complex.

Wrigley clocks bow out as Daylight Saving ends

At 2 a.m. Sunday, a maintenance man at the Wrigley Building on Michigan Avenue will pull the switch on the Chicago area's most famous clocks beginning the ritual of changing from daylight saving time to standard time.

The electricity will shut off and the 7½-foot-tall hour hands and 11½-foot-tall second hands will cease moving for one hour. Sixty minutes later the timepieces will be set in motion.

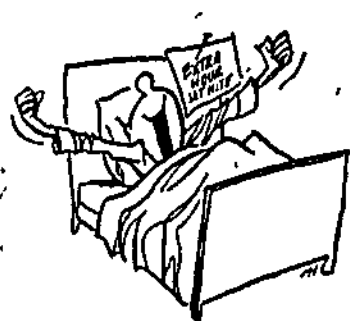

Daylight saving time is about to end, despite efforts in Congress to keep it alive in new format.

GOVERNMENT REPORTS show that the nation saved energy, reduced urban crime and experienced a decline in the number of fatal auto accidents during the two-year daylight saving time trial basis. The test had the country on eight months of daylight saving time and four months of standard time. The experiment ends Sunday.

To the Wrigley Building people it doesn't much matter when they have to fix their clocks. It's all done by remote control. No super human with the wing span of a prehistoric bird is needed to move the dials.

"There's nobody who uses his little pinky and gives it (the clock) a turn," said Robert Ryan, building superintendent. "Changing the clocks is unromantic and uninteresting."

The clockwork was completed in 1921 with the structure built into the surface of the building. The clocks are driven by a series of impulses which moves the hands minute-by-minute.

THE SOPHISTICATED electrical system is controlled in the basement. It is hooked into the 25 clocks inside the building, built by the architectural firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst and White. The cost of running the clocks is small, Ryan said.

The only thing to worry about is when to restart the clocks so they synchronize correctly. The procedure is done every six months (moving the clocks ahead takes about 30 seconds worth of impulses) from now on unless new legislation permanently puts the nation on daylight saving time eight or nine months of the year.

Before the trial period daylight saving time was in effect for six months, from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October.

Charlie Hume's friends appear on television,

by STIRLING MORITA

The way Charlie Hume puts it: "There aren't a lot of nuts like me who go all out for animals."

And if you look closely, chances are some of Charlie's exotic animals would have appeared, gracing magazine pages or the television screen. Whether it be Friendly, the lovely llama, modeling South American jewelry for a full-page ad in New Yorker magazine, or a bank commercial with rabbits, magically multiplying on the screen.

Or Louie, the kissing llama, nuzzling female members of a television crew during the credits of a TV documentary show.

AND IF YOU were around in 1958, you might have seen Hume sitting alongside John Daly in "What's My Line?" Charlie's line at the time was breeding strunks.

Hume says the television appearance gave him such notoriety that letters addressed to "Charles Hume, Chicago, Ill.," made their way to his Des Plaines mailbox. He has come a long way since he started raising guinea pigs in the basement of his Des Plaines home. Now, he raises everything from white mice and aoudads to multi-colored macaws and camels at his 80-acre Woodstock farm and his 2½-acre site near Golf and Arlington Heights roads, Arlington Heights.

But his job is not just supplying animals for ads. A majority of it is providing them for pets, zoos, Safari-lands and research laboratories from his company, Scientific Animal Lab and Farm Inc. He also distributes feed for the area from the Ralston-Purina Co. as Scientific Animal Feeds Inc.

BUT THE EMPHASIS with Hume has always been on breeding unusual animals or ones that are on the endangered species list. The reason? It is a challenge, Hume says.

Whether it be Friendly, the lovely llama, modeling South American jewelry for a full-page ad in New Yorker magazine, or a bank commercial with rabbits, magically multiplying on the screen.

Of course, the kissing llama, nuzzling female members of a television crew during the credits of a TV documentary show.

AND IF YOU were around in 1955, you might have seen Hume sitting alongside John Daly in "What's My Line?" Charlie's line at the time was breeding skunks.

Animals are Charlie's best friends

something when others are having a difficult time propagating them," he points out. "If someone doesn't help them propagate, there won't be any left."

He notes there is somewhat of a challenge in successfully breeding macaws because people have had trouble getting the birds to generate offspring. Hume adds he wants to keep endangered species such as Ceropsia, rare Australian geese and northern kitfoxes from extinction.

Other animals he has bred are Oriental pheasants, zebras, all types of deer, parrots, antelope, African and Hawaiian sheep, guinea pigs and knee-high African pigmy goats — the list continues.

HUME SAYS he thinks he was "born" to love animals. As a child in Missouri, he captured wild animals, hoping to tame them for pets. "I figure my folks thought I would end up in a zoo — on one side or the other of the bars."

He went to the University of Illinois, Urbana, where he earned degrees in zoology and mammalogy. It was there he took up the hobby of raising skunks, starting with one from a research project. Hume became an authority on skunks and later wrote a book about raising skunks. From there, he went to work for a pharmaceutical firm and began to raise guinea pigs.

Hume says he never dreamed his animal kingdom would grow this large. Jobs in the animal field are hard to find, he says, and many animal farms fail. Hume points to "diversification" in aiding his success.

In any given month, there may be as many as 15,000 young animals born — many of which are mice. Hume says he tries not to get attached to animals he knows will be leaving. Breeding is his purpose. "My main concern is they get the right food and the right environment."

BUT THERE ARE some that come close to Hume's heart. Besides Friendly and Louie, Hume favors his African grey parrot, Cico, who possesses a mastery of the English language.

Hume says although he would love to open his animal paradise to the public, he allows visiting by appointment only.

It is a full-time job for him, seven days a week — with him often working late into the night. But he loves every second and wouldn't have it any other way.

7 children, 2 adults hurt in Palatine road crash

Seven children and two adults were injured Friday in a two-car crash at the intersection of Palatine and Elm roads, Palatine Township.

Susan Clementi, 10, and her brothers James, 8; Matt, 12; and Paul, 9, were listed in serious condition at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, following the accident. In fair condition was Amy Clementi, 6.

Treated and released after the accident were Margaret Clementi, 35; Beth Clementi, 3; Anthony Schanna, 10, 625 Peebles, Palatine; and Betty Reed, 45, Roselle.

The Clementi family live at 1320 Haddon Ct. in the Willow Walk subdivision of Palatine.

COUNTY SHERIFF patrolman Bruce Gordon said the accident occurred at approximately 12:20 p.m. The vehicle driven by Mrs. Reed was southbound on Elm Road but was unable to stop for the stop sign at Palatine Road because of wet road conditions according to the police report. Mrs. Reed's car slid through the intersection hitting the westbound station wagon driven by Mrs. Clementi and sending it into a ditch. The children were passengers in the Clementi car.

Police departments from Barrington, Barrington Hills, Palatine and Cook County responded to the accident. Three Palatine ambulances, one Hoffman Estates ambulance and one private ambulance were used to transport the victims to the hospital.

Mrs. Reed was charged with failure to stop for a stop sign and is scheduled to appear Nov. 22 at 9:30 a.m. at the Niles branch of Circuit Court.

Library to reduce bookmobile service

The Palatine Public Library District will discontinue its bookmobile service to residents in northern Palatine Township after Wednesday.

Residents will be able to use the bookmobile Wednesday from 11 a.m. to noon at Lincoln School, 1021 Ridgewood Ln., and from 12:30 to 1:45 p.m. at Rand Grove Village Apartments, north of Rand Road on Long Grove Road.

The bookmobile service was discontinued this week for Inverness village residents who voted against joining the library district Oct. 10 by a 7-to-1 margin.

The free bookmobile service was subsidized during the past year by a $92,000 federal grant to introduce library services to nonresidents.

PALATINE TOWNSHIP residents, who voted against entering the library district in referendums earlier this year, also no longer receive the bookmobile service.

The library will continue to receive one-third of the federal grant this year to serve about 3,000 newly annexed residents in northern Palatine Township who will begin paying library taxes in 1977.

The federal funds will be used to purchase additional books and materials for the new library, 500 N. Benton St., said Andrea Balcken, administrative librarian.

It would not be "economically feasible" to continue operating the bookmobile each week when it makes only two stops in a small unincorporated area that is located near to the library, she said.

The library has leased the bookmobile from the North Suburban Library System. About 3,500 of the books that have been transported in the bookmobile will become part of the library's permanent collection, Ms. Balcken said.

Dist. 211 adult ed classes to start

Several High School Dist. 211 continuing education courses are scheduled to enter their second sessions within the next few weeks.

Pattern drafting and design starts Tuesday at Fremd High School, 1000 S. Quentin Rd., Palatine.

Beginning typing and typing refresher courses begin Nov. 3 at Palatine High School, 150 E. Wood St., Palatine, and at Schaumburg High School, 1100 W. Schaumburg Rd., Schaumburg.

Hair grooming will be taught at Palatine High School beginning Nov. 4.

A beginning ski class, using the graduated length method of instruction, will be offered at Schaumburg High School Nov. 17. Practice sessions will be held at Villa Olivia Ski Slopes.

Four advanced real estate courses, advanced principles, contract and conveyancing, appraisal and financing, and sales brokerage, will begin Dec. 3 at Conant High School, 700 E. Cougar Tr., Hoffman Estates.

Preregistration at the Dist. 211 Administrative Center, 1750 Roselle Rd., Palatine, is required. Registration will not be accepted the first night of classes. For additional information, contact the Continuing Education Office at 359-7233 or 359-7234.

Village goal $11,500

Community chest drive donations ahead of 1974

Contributions to the Rolling Meadows Community Chest Drive are running ahead of last year and campaign organizers are hopeful the $11,500 goal will be reached.

James Fitzgerald, treasurer of the local drive, said about $1,373 has been collected in contributions from residents in the first two weeks of the campaign. The amount is about $300 more than what was received by this time last year, he said.

Fitzgerald said the progress of the drive so far makes him optimistic that the $11,500 goal will be reached. Donations fell about $1,000 short of the same goal last year, but campaign organizers have said they think adverse economic conditions hampered the 1974 drive.

Contributions from local businesses and industries have not yet begun to come in, Fitzgerald said, but several firms have agreed to payroll deduction plans.

Harry O'Brien, executive director of the Rolling Meadows Chamber of Commerce, is heading the business campaign.

PROCEEDS FROM the Community Chest drive help support a number of local organizations and service agencies. A large share of the funds collected aid activities of Boy Scout, Girl Scout and Camp Fire Girls troops.

Other groups that benefit from the annual fundraising campaign include the Clearbrook Center, Northwest Mental Health Center, the Salvation Army Counseling Center and Service Unit, USO and Homemaker Family Service.

Anyone interested in working on either the residential or business campaign or would like to serve on the Community Chest board of directors should contact Board Pres Deane Wandersee at 398-3800 during business hours.

The next Community Chest board meeting is set for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Bank of Rolling Meadows. Meetings are open to the public.

7 children, 2 adults hurt in Palatine Rd. car crash

Seven children and two adults were injured Friday in a two-car crash at the intersection of Palatine and Ela roads, Palatine Township.

Susan Clementi, 10, and her brothers James, 8; Matt, 12; and Paul, 9, were listed in serious condition at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, following the accident. In fair condition was Amy Clementi, 6.

Treated and released after the accident were Margaret Clementi, 35; Beth Clementi, 3; Anthony Schanna, 10, 825 Peables, Palatine; and Betty Reed, 45, Roselle.

The Clementi family live at 1320 Huntington Ct. in the Willow Walk subdivision of Palatine.

COUNTY SHERIFF patrolman Bruce Gordon said the accident occurred at approximately 12:20 p.m. The vehicle driven by Mrs. Reed was southbound on Ela Road but was unable to stop for the stop sign at Palatine Road because of wet road conditions according to the police report. Mrs. Reed's car slid through the intersection hitting the westbound station wagon driven by Mrs. Clementi and sending it into a ditch. The children were passengers in the Clementi car.

Police departments from Barrington, Barrington Hills, Palatine and Cook County responded to the accident. Three Palatine ambulances, one Hoffman Estates ambulance and one private ambulance were used to transport the victims to the hospital.

Mrs. Reed was charged with failure to stop for a stop sign and is scheduled to appear Nov. 22 at 9:30 a.m. at the Niles branch of Circuit Court.

Wrigley clocks bow out as Daylight Saving ends

At 2 a.m. Sunday, a maintenance man at the Wrigley Building on Michigan Avenue will pull the switch on the Chicago area's most famous clocks beginning the ritual of changing from daylight saving time to standard time.

The electricity will shut off and the 7½-foot-tall hour hands and 11½-foot-tall second hands will cease moving for one hour. Sixty minutes later the timepieces will be set in motion.

Daylight saving time is about to end, despite efforts in Congress to keep it alive in new format.

GOVERNMENT REPORTS show that the nation saved energy, reduced urban crime and experienced a decline in the number of fatal auto accidents during the two-year daylight saving time trial basis. The test had the country on eight months of daylight saving time and four months of standard time. The experiment ends Sunday.

To the Wrigley Building people it doesn't much matter when they have to fix their clocks. It's all done by remote control. No super human with the wing span of a prehistoric bird is needed to move the dials.

"There's nobody who uses his little pinky and gives it (the clock) a turn," said Robert Ryan, building superintendent. "Changing the clocks is unromantic and uninteresting."

The clockwork was completed in 1921 with the structure built into the surface of the building. The clocks are driven by a series of impulses which moves the hands minute-by-minute.

THE SOPHISTICATED electrical system is controlled in the basement. It is hooked into the 25 clocks inside the building, built by the architectural firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst and White. The cost of running the clocks is small, Ryan said.

The only thing to worry about is when to restart the clocks so they synchronize correctly. The procedure is done every six months (moving the clocks ahead takes about 30 seconds worth of impulses) from now on unless new legislation permanently puts the nation on daylight saving time eight or nine months of the year.

Before the trial period daylight saving time was in effect for six months, from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October.

He talks to the animals

Charlie Hume's friends appear on television, in magazines and as stars of advertisements

by STIRLING MORITA

The way Charlie Hume puts it: "There aren't a lot of nuts like me ... who go all out for animals."

And if you look closely, chances are some of Charlie's exotic animals would have appeared, gracing magazine pages or the television screen. Whether it be Friendly, the lovely llama, modeling South American jewelry for a full-page ad in New Yorker magazine, or a bank commercial with rabbits, magically multiplying on the screen.

Or Louie, the kissing llama, nuzzling female members of a television crew during the credits of a TV documentary show.

AND IF YOU were around in 1955, you might have seen Hume sitting alongside John Daly in "What's My Line?" Charlie's line at the time was breeding skunks.

Hume says the television appearance gave him such notoriety that letters addressed to "Charles Hume, Chicago, Ill.," made their way to his Des Plaines mailbox. He has come a long way since he started raising guinea pigs in the basement of his Des Plaines home. Now, he raises everything from white mice and soundads to multi-colored macaws and camels at his 80-acre Woodstock farm and his 2½-acre site near Golf and Arlington Heights roads, Arlington Heights.

But his job is not just supplying animals for ads. A majority of it is providing them for pets, zoos, Safari-lands and research laboratories from his company, Scientific Animal Lab and Farm Inc. He also distributes feed for the area from the Ralston-Purina Co. as Scientific Animal Feeds Inc.

BUT THE EMPHASIS with Hume has always been on breeding unusual animals or ones that are on the endangered species list. The reason? It is a challenge, Hume says.

Saturday

Animals are Charlie's best friends

something when others are having a difficult time propagating them," he points out. "If someone doesn't help them propagate, there won't be any left."

He notes there is somewhat of a challenge in successfully breeding macaws because people have had trouble getting the birds to generate offspring. Hume adds he wants to keep endangered species such as Ceropis, rare Australian geese and northern kitfoxes from extinction.

Other animals he has bred are Oriental pheasants, zebras, all types of deer, parrots, antelope, African and Hawaiian sheep, guinea pigs and knee-high African pigmy goats — the list continues.

HUME SAYS he thinks he was "born" to love animals. As a child in Missouri, he captured wild animals, hoping to tame them for pets. "I figure my folks thought I would end up in a zoo — on one side or the other of the bars."

He went to the University of Illinois, Urbana, where he earned degrees in zoology and mammalogy. It was there he took up the hobby of raising skunks, starting with one from a research project. Hume became an authority on skunks and later wrote a book about raising skunks. From there, he went to work for a pharmaceutical firm and began to raise guinea pigs.

Hume says he never dreamed his animal kingdom would grow this large. Jobs in the animal field are hard to find, he says, and many animal farms fail. Hume points to "diversification" in aiding his success.

In any given month, there may be as many as 15,000 young animals born — many of which are mice. Hume says he tries not to get attached to animals he knows will be leaving. Breeding is his purpose. "My main concern is they get the right food and the right environment."

BUT THERE ARE some that come close to Hume's heart. Besides Friendly and Louie, Hume favors his African grey parrot, Cleo, who possesses a mastery of the English language.

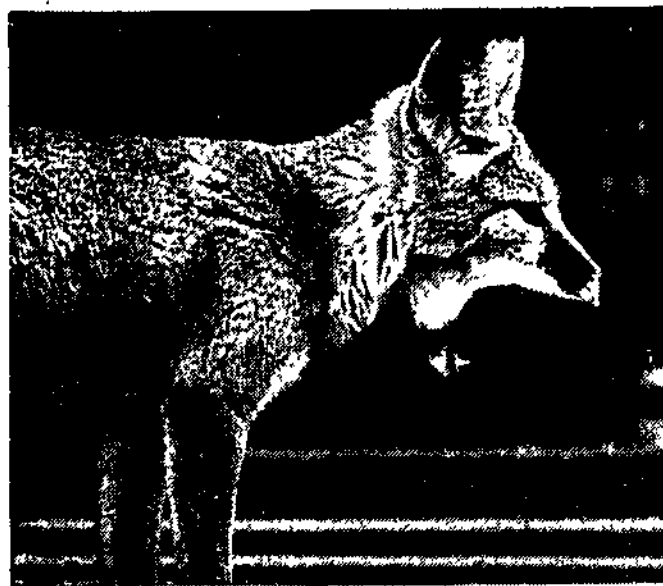

Hume says although he would love to open his animal paradise to the public, he allows visiting by appointment only.

It is a full-time job for him, seven days a week — with him often working late into the night. But he loves every second and wouldn't have it any other way.

Library to reduce bookmobile service

The Palatine Public Library District will discontinue its bookmobile service to residents in northern Palatine Township after Wednesday.

Residents will be able to use the bookmobile Wednesday from 11 a.m. to noon at Lincoln School, 1021 Ridgewood Ln., and from 12:30 to 1:45 p.m. at Rand Grove Village Apartments, north of Rand Road on Long Grove Road.

The bookmobile service was discontinued this week for Inverness village residents who voted against joining the library district Oct. 10 by a 740-1 margin.

The free bookmobile service was subsidized during the past year by a $92,000 federal grant to introduce library services to nonresidents.

PALATINE TOWNSHIP residents, who voted against entering the library district in referendums earlier this year, also no longer receive the bookmobile service.

The library will continue to receive one-third of the federal grant this year to serve about 3,000 newly annexed residents in northern Palatine Township who will begin paying library taxes in 1977.

The federal funds will be used to purchase additional books and materials for the new library, 500 N. Benton St., said Andrea Balcken, administrative librarian.

It would not be "economically feasible" to continue operating the bookmobile each week when it makes only two stops in a small unincorporated area that is located near to the library, she said.

The library has leased the bookmobile from the North Suburban Library System. About 3,500 of the books that have been transported in the bookmobile will become part of the library's permanent collection, Ms. Balcken said.

Palatine discrimination suit to be springboard?

by JOANN VAN WYE

A sex discrimination complaint filed against the Palatine Police Dept. will serve as "a good springboard to look into the hiring and promotion of women in other law enforcement agencies," said Julie Sass of the Minority Information Referral Center.

At a Friday press conference Ms. Sass said the center and several other women's organizations were prepared to stand behind Mary Frantz, who alleges she was dismissed from the Palatine Police Dept. because she dated a male radio operator.

Ms. Sass said this complaint could lead to an investigation of employment practices in other area police departments.

In her complaint filed with the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission, Mrs. Frantz, 25, alleges she was denied due process when she was fired Oct. 13 and that she was discriminated against because of her sex. She was a civilian community service aide with the department.

THE DISCRIMINATION charge stems from the fact no disciplinary action was taken against the radio operator, William Boczniewicz, who she dated Sept. 23.

"I feel if I was a male dating a female this action would not have been taken," Mrs. Frantz said.

She explained one of the conditions of her employment June 2 as a clerk-typist was that she verbally agree not to date any male personnel. Chief Jerry Bratcher asked for the verbal agreement because of rumors he had heard about her involvement in 1972 with an employee of the police department, she said.

"I did agree to this condition since I desperately needed the job to support myself and my son, and also because police work has been and will continue to be my career," Mrs. Frantz said.

She added the agreement was made unwillingly and it was her understanding it was only for her three-month probation period. Mrs. Frantz said she was not aware of any village rules regarding dating of employees and, to her knowledge, she was the only employee forced to make this agreement.

CHIEF BRATCHER dismissed Mrs. Frantz Oct. 11 pending the outcome of an Oct. 13 hearing; Lt. Raymond Radlein was present at the hearing in which Mrs. Frantz related the conditions of her hiring. Chief Bratcher told her she was being dismissed for violation of this condition, she said.

No warning was given before the dismissal, nor was she fully apprised of the charges against her prior to the hearing, Mrs. Frantz said.

"The loss of my job has not only caused me financial hardship, but has set back my career goal, which is to become a police officer," Mrs. Frantz said. "I cannot understand why disciplinary action was necessary when my work was never in question, only my personal life. I also cannot quietly accept my dismissal and the fact that the male involved was not dismissed."

Mrs. Frantz is the daughter of Thomas LaDore, 532 Bruno Dr., who ran for a seat on the village board in the last election. She said she did not know if politics were involved in her dismissal, but added that Lt. Radlein instead of Lt. Robert Center, who was in charge of her division, sat in on her hearing.

Lt. Center was dismissed as chief by the current trustees in 1973, but has remained on the force as a lieutenant.

MRS. FRANTZ'S complaint was filed with the FEPC Oct. 16. A FEPC spokesman said it would take approximately 60 days before an investigator is assigned to the case because of a backlog.

"We feel this is definitely a case of discrimination," said Ms. Sass. She added that a job description or copy of the personnel policy never was made available to Mrs. Frantz.

"We feel sure these kind of things are not done with maligning but out of some kind of ignorance of the law," Ms. Sass said, adding that since the village receives federal funds it is subject to affirmative action in the hiring of minorities and fair employment laws.

Currently, only one Latino and one woman are employed as patrolman on a force of approximately 35, she added.

To Fulle, zoning official

Old Madrid builder tells of 2 payoffs

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

The builders of the Old Madrid Apartments in Palatine paid two county officials about $92,500 to win high-density, multiple-family zoning for the controversial project, two government witnesses testified Friday in U.S. Dist. Court.

Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines received two cash payments, $10,000 and $20,000, to end county board delays of zoning for the 135-unit project at Northwest Highway west of Hicks Road in Palatine, contractor William J. Adams said.

Paul Marcy, secretary of the County Board of Appeals, was paid $55,000 in $100 bills to influence project zoning, Adams said during the fifth day of testimony in the trial of Fulle.

FULLE WAS indicted Feb. 13 on charges of extortion, tax fraud and perjury. One extortion count charges that Fulle received the $20,000 payoff in 1970 from Adams, who was acting for Seltzer, Inc., developer of the apartments.

Marcy was not named in the Feb. 13 indictment which also included County Comr. Charles Bonk and County Zoning Administrator Bernard J. O'Brien.

U. S. Atty. Howard M. Hoffmann attempted to conceal Marcy's identity Friday. Hoffmann asked U.S. Dist. Court Judge Bernard M. Decker to prohibit witnesses and defense attorneys from naming or identifying Marcy.

WHEN DEFENSE attorney Arthur

Zimmerman told Decker that Marcy is a subpoenaed defense witness, Hoffmann withdrew the motion.

Adams, a 69-year-old plumbing and heating contractor said he delivered the $55,000 to Marcy at County Zoning Board offices in the Civic Center June 27, 1970. The payoff followed a conversation in which Marcy allegedly rejected $40,000.

Marcy was not available for comment Friday.

In her complaint filed with the Illinois Fair Employment Practices Commission, Mrs. Frantz, 25, alleges she was denied due process when she was fired Oct. 13 and that she was discriminated against because of her sex. She was a civilian community service aide with the department.

THE DISCRIMINATION charge stems from the fact no disciplinary action was taken against the radio operator, William Boczniewicz, who she dated Sept. 23.

"I feel if I was a male dating a female this action would not have been taken," Mrs. Frantz said.

She explained one of the conditions of her employment June 2 as a clerk-typist was that she verbally agree not to date any male personnel. Chief Jerry Bratcher asked for the verbal agreement because of rumors he had heard about her involvement in 1972 with an employee of the police department, she said.

"I did agree to this condition since I desperately needed the job to support myself and my son, and also because police work has been and will continue to be my career," Mrs. Frantz said.

She added the agreement was made unwillingly and it was her understanding it was only for her three-month probation period. Mrs. Frantz said she was not aware of any village rules regarding dating of employees and, to her knowledge, she was the only employee forced to make this agreement.

CHIEF BRATCHER dismissed Mrs. Frantz Oct. 11 pending the outcome of an Oct. 13 hearing. Lt. Raymond Radlein was present at the hearing in which Mrs. Frantz related the conditions of her hiring. Chief Bratcher told her she was being dismissed for violation of this condition, she said.

No warning was given before the dismissal, nor was she fully apprised of the charges against her prior to the hearing, Mrs. Frantz said.

"The loss of my job has not only caused me financial hardship, but has set back my career goal, which is to become a police officer," Mrs. Frantz said. "I cannot understand why disciplinary action was necessary when my work was never in question, only my personal life. I also cannot quietly accept my dismissal and the fact that the male involved was not dismissed."

Mrs. Frantz is the daughter of Thomas LaDore, 532 Bruno Dr., who ran for a seat on the village board in the last election. She said she did not know if politics were involved in her dismissal, but added that Lt. Radlein instead of Lt. Robert Center, who was in charge of her division, sat in on her hearing.

Lt. Centner was dismissed as chief by the current trustees in 1973, but has remained on the force as a lieutenant.

MRS. FRANTZ'S complaint was filed with the FEPC Oct. 16. A FEPC spokesman said it would take approximately 60 days before an investigator is assigned to the case because of a backlog.

"We feel this is definitely a case of discrimination," said Ms. Sass. She added that a job description or copy of the personnel policy never was made available to Mrs. Frantz.

"We feel sure these kind of things are not done with malicious but out of some kind of ignorance of the law," Ms. Sass said, adding that since the village receives federal funds it is subject to affirmative action in the hiring of minorities and fair employment laws.

Currently, only one Latino and one woman are employed as patrolman on a force of approximately 35, she added.

Old Madrid builders tell of payoffs

Fulle at County Board offices June 15, 1970, prior to a board vote which increased the number of apartments to be built on the 66-acre project at Hicks and Baldwin roads.

SELLERGEN INC. purchased the property, known as the Pebble Creek

Golf Course, in 1969 for $1.5 million. The land was zoned for construction of 500 apartment units.

The controversial Sellergren proposal, which included 1,350 units, was criticized by local homeowner groups and the Village of Palatine filed formal objection to the zoning request.

County officials lost the village's objection petition. Absence of the objection reduced the number of votes needed to approve the zoning from three-fourths to one half.

Adams said he met Marcy in late 1969. "I told him that my client had a problem financially. I asked him if 55 big reasons would get the job done. He smiled and said he would look into it," Adams said.

WHEN FULLE twice deferred board consideration of the project, Adams arranged an appointment at Fulle's office. "I told him I was prepared to pay $20,000 to get the job done. He said he would look into it," Adams said.

Adams received the cash to pay Fulle from builder Howard Sellergren in a county building washroom, he said.

"I dropped him (Fulle) the envelope and asked him how it looked. It looked like everything would be OK, thanks, I believe he said."

ADAMS SAID he was awarded a $808,000 contract to furnish plumbing for the apartment building.

About $93,000 — which is $3,000 more than Adams collected in cash from Sellergren officials for payoffs — of the plumbing contract — is unpaid, Adams said.

The William J. Adams Engineering firm has obtained a lien on the apartment project to collect the debt.

"Did you believe that Mr. Adams took the entire $90,000?" Zimmerman asked James Sellergren. "No, sir," Sellergren answered.

BOTH HOWARD and James Sellergren said during cross-examination that they denied knowledge of the payoff when interviewed by Internal Revenue Service agents in 1974.

Neither of the Sellergrens witnessed transfer of the money to Fulle.

Howard Sellergren told the jury that $30,000 of the $90,000 came from his safety deposit box and was Las Vegas gambling winnings. Although Sellergren accumulated as much as $20,000 in the bank box at various times, he said Friday that he paid no income taxes in 1969 and that he received a $4,700 refund.

ONE OF SEVEN children injured Friday in a two-car crash in Palatine Township waits for aid near the site of the accident.

WET PAVEMENTS were blamed for this accident Friday in Palatine Township which left seven children and two adults injured. The accident occurred at the intersection of Palatine and Elm roads.

Apartment blaze routs residents

by JOHN MAES

Fire gutted a Hoffman Estates apartment Friday night, routing a number of residents from a 50-unit building in the Prairie Ridge apartment complex on Bode Road.

The blaze broke out in the apartment of Mark Lee, 414 Bode Rd. No one was injured, and Lee's three children in the apartment at the time managed to escape the flames.

The fire reportedly broke out in a back bedroom of the Lee apartment when a television burst into flames. There was no damage estimate.

Lee's 15-year-old son Timothy, said he had turned the television set on and gone to the kitchen to fix some supper when he smelled smoke. He then alerted his brother Randy, 19, in another room, grabbed his 6-year-old sister, Candy and a pet hamster and fled.

THEIR FATHER was at work at the time and their mother Marilyn had left to go to the store.

Hoffman Estates Fire Chief Carl Selke said one, maybe two, other apartments were damaged by flames. He said several others received smoke and water damage.

Upon arriving, fire crews swept through the three-story building, knocking on doors of apartments and warning residents to evacuate.

One resident, Marcel Gross, who lives in an adjacent apartment, said she was talking on the telephone when a neighbor knocked on the door to tell her there was a fire.

Hoffman Estates firefighter James Dugan, one of the first on the scene said fire crews could see "pitch black smoke" coming from the building while enroute to the blaze.

HE SAID THE smoke was so thick it prevented firemen from entering the building through the front entrance, but the flames were extinguished within an hour.

Fire companies from Schaumburg and Elk Grove village were also called to the scene.

Building managers said gas and electricity were shut off to prevent further damage.

Mrs. Maureen McAndrew, one of the managers, said at least 12 families temporarily would be displaced as a result of the fire. The local Red Cross and firemen's auxiliary were making lodging arrangements for those residents.

New York's woes plunge Dow 14.64

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices Friday were sharply lower in fairly active trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones Industrial average, which gained 5.59 points Thursday, plunged 14.64 to 840.52. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 1.41 to 89.83. The price of an average NYSE share lost 43 cents.

Declines held a strong lead over advances, 890 to 515, among the 1,822 issues crossing the ticker.

Sales totaled 18,120,000 shares, compared with 17,900,000 shares traded Thursday.

The market, which had been lower in early trading, declined sharply after the Senate Banking Committee failed to reach agreement on a bill to provide guaranteed loans to New York.

TENNECO WARRANTS "A" led the Big Board actives, up 7-32 to 11-32 on 395,500 shares. A Tenneco unit and

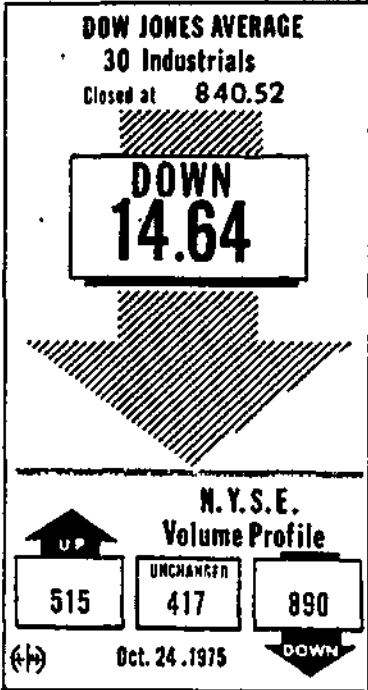

Standard Oil of California, which lost 1 1/8 to 30 1/4 Thursday announced an oil find in California. Tenneco was second active, up 1/8 to 24 1/4 on 363,300 shares. Polaroid followed, off 1 1/4 to 5 5/8 on 285,700 shares.

The glamors, chemicals and blue chips were hard hit by the selling wave, which carried most major stock groups into minus territory.

active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The price of an average Amex share lost six cents. Volume came to 1,815,000 shares, against 1,576,000 shares turned over Thursday.

Officials doubt value

Sale of 'unneeded' land to bring little money

A proposal to raise needed revenues by selling "unneeded" village land would bring Mount Prospect only a minimal amount of money, village officials have said.

After several months of study, the village board's public health and safety committee has concluded there are only a few small parcels that could be sold.

In July, former trustee George B. Anderson suggested the village sell unneeded village land dedicated for public streets and alleys. He cited five lots, two along the Mount Prospect golf course and three along Weller Creek, which he estimated could bring the village $125,000.

"These are quick tax dollars," Anderson said at the time. SOME OF THE unneeded village land, however, cannot be sold because of prior commitments and flooding problems, according to the committee's study.

Trustee E. F. Richardson said three lots at the northwest corner of Lonnquist Boulevard and We-Gu Trail were leased to the Mount Prospect Park District in exchange for a well site and therefore cannot be sold.

"The two parcels adjacent to the south side of Weller Creek between We-Gu and Na-Wa-Ta are in a flood plain area," Richardson said. He said the village therefore does not want them sold for development.

Other smaller parcels, however, are still under study and Richardson said he is waiting for appraisals. Documents on one of these parcels, between We-Gu Trail and See-Gu Avenue, should be available by November.

In making his proposal Anderson said that any unneeded property should be offered to adjacent property owners at its appraised value. He said if they are not interested, the property should be sold to the highest bidder.

County zoners weigh Magnus battle

by ANN SLAVICK

The battle over zoning for the 42-acre Magnus Farm has given county officials a massive legal headache.

County Zoning Board of Appeals members Friday heard arguments from the villages of Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights and from Alexander Magnus, owner of the nursing and retirement home.

At the hearing in Chicago, the two villages urged the property be zoned for single-family homes with a special use permit to allow development of the new nursing and retirement home facilities proposed by Magnus.

But Magnus and his attorney, Perry Snyderman, argued the land should continue to be zoned for 17 multiple-family units per acre with a special use to restrict nursing and retirement homes.

AFTER AN HOUR of listening to the two sides, county zoners realized that they were faced with a set of impossible alternatives brought on by the unique legal position taken by the county in dropping its old zoning ordinance and maps in exchange for a new ordinance.

If the county zones the land R-7 multiple-family under the new ordinance with a special use, it will face a lawsuit by the two villages.

If the county reverts the zoning to single-family home use with a special use, it could face a suit from Magnus.

And if the county board isn't able to muster the 3/4ths vote needed to make some zoning decision on the land, the property might end up as the only land in Cook County that is unzoned and could be developed any way the owner wishes.

ZONING BOARD chairman Alex Selth urged Magnus and the villages to reach a compromise before zoners are forced to make a decision.

But short of a compromise, the zoning board will meet Nov. 20 to decide on its recommendations for the property.

The final decision on how to zone the land is up to the county board of commissioners.

The legal mess is complicated because an existing covenant on the land which restricts its use to nursing homes and housing for the elderly may no longer apply because of recent legal precedents questioning the

Wrigley clocks bow out as Daylight Saving ends

At 2 a.m. Sunday, a maintenance man at the Wrigley Building on Michigan Avenue will pull the switch on the Chicago area's most famous clocks beginning the ritual of changing from daylight saving time to standard time.

The electricity will shut off and the 7½-foot-tall hour hands and 11½-foot-tall second hands will cease moving for one hour. Sixty minutes later the timepieces will be set in motion.

Daylight saving time is about to end, despite efforts in Congress to keep it alive in new format.

GOVERNMENT REPORTS show that the nation saved energy, reduced urban crime and experienced a decline in the number of fatal auto accidents during the two-year daylight saving time trial basis. The test had the country on eight months of daylight saving time and four months of standard time. The experiment ends Sunday.

To the Wrigley Building people it doesn't much matter when they have to fix their clocks. It's all done by remote control. No super human with the wing span of a prehistoric bird is needed to move the dials.

"There's nobody who uses his little pinky and gives it (the clock) a turn," said Robert Ryan, building superintendent. "Changing the clocks is unromantic and uninteresting."

The clockwork was completed in 1921 with the structure built into the surface of the building. The clocks are driven by a series of impulses which moves the hands minute-by-minute.

THE SOPHISTICATED electrical system is controlled in the basement. It is hooked into the 25 clocks inside the building, built by the architectural firm of Graham, Anderson, Probst and White. The cost of running the clocks is small, Ryan said.

The only thing to worry about is when to restart the clocks so they synchronize correctly. The procedure is done every six months (moving the clocks ahead takes about 30 seconds worth of impulses) from now on unless new legislation permanently puts the nation on daylight saving time eight or nine months of the year.

Before the trial period daylight saving time was in effect for six months, from the last Sunday in April to the last Sunday in October.

He talks to the animals

Charlie Hume's friends appear on television,
in magazines and as stars of advertisements

by STIRLING MORITA

The way Charlie Hume puts it: "There aren't a lot of nuts like me ... who go all out for animals."

And if you look closely, chances are some of Charlie's exotic animals would have appeared, gracing magazine pages or the television screen. Whether it be Friendly, the lovely llama, modeling South American jewelry for a full-page ad in New Yorker magazine, or a bank commercial with rabbits, magically multiplying on the screen.

Or Louie, the kissing llama, nuzzling female members of a television crew during the credits of a TV documentary show.

AND IF YOU were around in 1955, you might have seen Hume sitting alongside John Daly in "What's My Line?" Charlie's line at the time was breeding skunks.

Hume says the television appearance gave him such notoriety that letters addressed to "Charles Hume, Chicago, Ill.," made their way to his Des Plaines mailbox. He has come a long way since he started raising guinea pigs in the basement of his Des Plaines home. Now, he raises everything from white mice and soundads to multi-colored macaws and camels at his 80-acre Woodstock farm and his 2½-acre site near Golf and Arlington Heights roads, Arlington Heights.

But his job is not just supplying animals for ads. A majority of it is providing them for pets, zoos, Safari-lands and research laboratories from his company, Scientific Animal Lab and Farm Inc. He also distributes feed for the area from the Ralston-Purina Co. as Scientific Animal Feeds Inc.

BUT THE EMPHASIS with Hume has always been on breeding unusual animals or ones that are on the endangered species list. The reason? It is a challenge, Hume says.

Saturday

Animals are Charlie's best friends

something when others are having a difficult time propagating them," he points out. "If someone doesn't help them propagate, there won't be any left."

He notes there is somewhat of a challenge in successfully breeding macaws because people have had trouble getting the birds to generate offspring. Hume adds he wants to keep endangered species such as Ceropsia, rare Australian geese and northern kitfoxes from extinction.

Other animals he has bred are Oriental pheasants, zebras, all types of deer, parrots, antelope, African and Hawaiian sheep, guinea pigs and knee-high African pigmy goats — the list continues.

HUME SAYS he thinks he was "born" to love animals. As a child in Missouri, he captured wild animals, hoping to tame them for pets. "I figure my folks thought I would end up in a zoo — on one side or the other of the bars."

He went to the University of Illinois, Urbana, where he earned degrees in zoology and mammalogy. It was there he took up the hobby of raising skunks, starting with one from a research project. Hume became an authority on skunks and later wrote a book about raising skunks. From there, he went to work for a pharmaceutical firm and began to raise guinea pigs.

Hume says he never dreamed his animal kingdom would grow this large. Jobs in the animal field are hard to find, he says, and many animal farms fail. Hume points to "diversification" in aiding his success.

In any given month, there may be as many as 15,000 young animals born — many of which are mice. Hume says he tries not to get attached to animals he knows will be leaving. Breeding is his purpose. "My main concern is they get the right food and the right environment."

BUT THERE ARE some that come close to Hume's heart. Besides Friendly and Louie, Hume favors his African grey parrot, Cleo, who possesses a mastery of the English language.

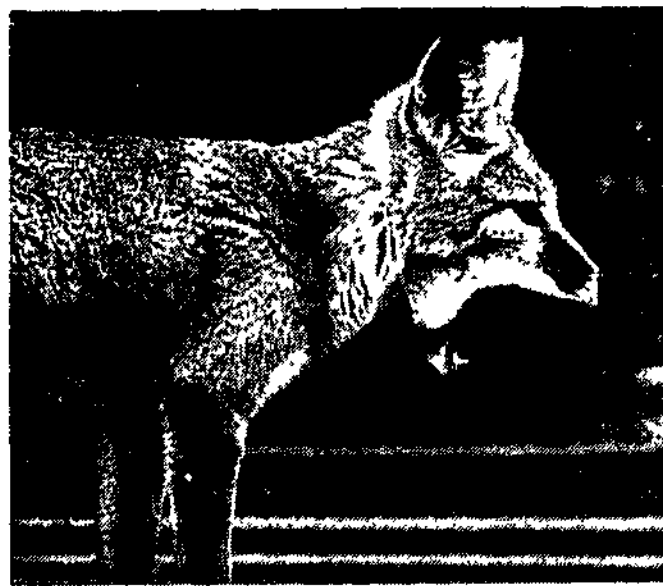

Hume says although he would love to open his animal paradise to the public, he allows visiting by appointment only.

It is a full-time job for him, seven days a week — with him often working late into the night. But he loves every second and wouldn't have it any other way.

The villages, fearful that loss of the covenant could leave the land open for massive apartment development, filed a formal objection. That means 12 of the 16 board members must vote in favor of the R-7 zoning for it to go into effect.

If the county zoning board decides to recommend R-7 zoning on the property, it also could mean the county board would need 12 votes to veto the zoning board recommendation.

ARLINGTON HEIGHTS Village Atty. Jack Siegel said he thought if the county board failed to get 12 votes for either type of zoning the land would probably remain under the old county ordinance at 17 units.

But Seth said the old ordinance will be invalid. He said it was his opinion that unless the county board sets some zoning for the land it will be left with no zoning at all.

Polls open 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. today at four locations for River Trails Park District's annexation referendum.

Residents of apartments in an area bounded by Palatine, Wolf, River and Old Willow roads must vote to come into the district and current district residents must vote to accept them. About 3,500 residents live in the proposed annexation area.

Park district residents may vote on annexation at the park district office, 1313 Burning Bush Ln., Mount Prospect.

Residents of Gladstone Glen apartments may vote at Stevenson School, 1375 S. Wolf Rd., Wheeling; residents of Quincy Park quadrangle may vote at 1515 Quaker Ln., and polls will be set up at the Flamingo Hotel, 1246 River Rd. for residents of Willow River, Loch Lomond, Apple Tree and Willow Park apartments.
